Martin Antoine Ryerson

In dedicating THE 1912 CAP AND GOWN to Martin Antoine Ryerson the editors are choosing to honor one of the best and truest friends our University has had. Mr. Ryerson early became connected with the University of Chicago; he has been for many years a trustee of the University and is at present President of the Board of Trustees. He is also the donor of the Ryerson Physical Laboratory, the Ryerson Laboratory Annex and Vincent Field on the corner of 57th Street and Lexington Avenue.

Mr. Ryerson has been a resident of Chicago nearly all his life. He was born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, on October 26, 1856. He came to reside in Chicago when very young, and in 1878 received the degree of LL. B. from Harvard. In 1881 he married Miss Carrie B. Hutchinson of Chicago.

Mr. Ryerson's life is a busy one. Besides being director of several banks and large corporations, he is a director of the Art Institute, the Field Museum, and the Carnegie Institution, and trustee of the Chicago Orphan Asylum. While Mr. Ryerson's personal acquaintance with the students has not been extensive, his constant interest in our affairs is well understood and we may safely say that next to the founder of our University, he has been the most warmly loved and admired of Chicago's many friends and benefactors.

The Merriam Campaign

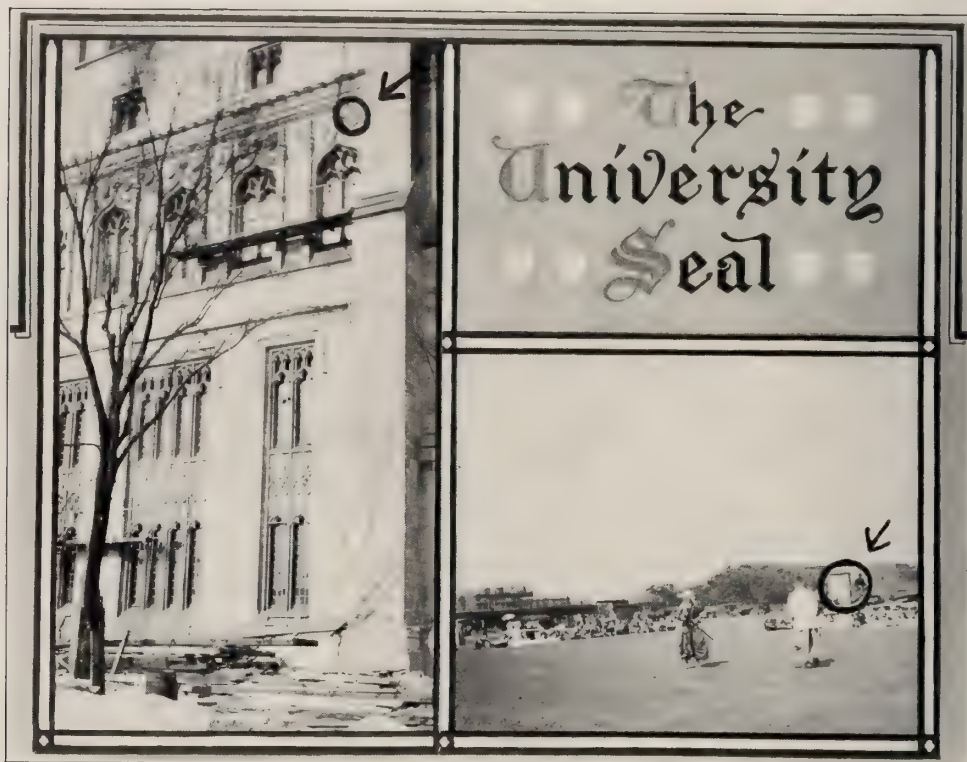

Led by Assistant Professor Charles E. Merriam, the University of Chicago faculty members, student body and even janitors last spring made a swift descent into the strenuous field of politics that was unprecedented in the history of any American university. Although it failed to receive the crown of victory, the campaign waged by Mr. Merriam for the mayoralty of Chicago was the most stirring of the last decade and the potency of the "scholar in politics" was borne in upon the minds of the complacent political bosses of the city with an emphasis that will admit of no forgetting in the immediate future.

Just as the politicians had smiled with amused tolerance when Mr. Merriam came out as an aldermanic candidate, so did they again smile when they heard he was to be candidate for the mayoralty. But they already knew better than to say he was not practical. Quietly and firmly, nevertheless, he went about the city making friends of strangers and earnest supporters of friends.

Then the primaries approached. Lined up against Mr. Merriam for the Republican nomination were two boss-named candidates, each with an organization of paid workers. By this time the students and alumni took a hand. The Merriam club was formed on the campus, a club of men who not only believed but were ready to achieve. Against almost hopeless odds they began their work. And they really worked. They distributed circulars, they tacked up signs, they got out voters to register, they checked up polling lists, they traced the professional repeaters, they canvassed precincts, they argued with relatives, friends and strangers, and all the time they talked Merriam. And on the night of April 4, when the votes were counted they found that Merriam had rolled up a vote that equalled that of his opponents together and had won the Republican nomination.

Then came the real campaign. Against Mr. Merriam was Carter H. Harrison a former mayor and the head of a powerful political organization. It looked almost hopeless, even to his most optimistic friends. All the work of the primary campaign was repeated—and more. On election day, over a hundred students and more faculty members arose before sunrise and went down into the slums of the first ward, there to battle with the forces of "Hinky Dink" and his paid army of repeaters. As challengers, clerks and judges they stood up against the thugs of the tenderloin and challenged the purchased ballots. More than one of them was thrown out of the polling place, and more than one returned to the campus with a bruised face; but the vote cast in the corrupt wards was less than it had ever been before.

The weapons of principle and of ideals, however, were powerless before the stronger ones of gold and by a majority of 17,000 votes Harrison was elected. It was a bitter defeat, but a glorious one. Against almost insurmountable obstacles 160,000 voters had been made to place their faith in a man with a new political cause. And though unrewarded by the joy of success the University community had the satisfaction of entering the opening wedge in the long fight for a new political regime, and a new and strong body of recruits was added to the small army enrolled in the fight for decency. Perhaps that was better than victory.

"Argent on a phoenix gules an open book on the first, edged and bound or." Such is Mr. Pierre la Rose's description of the seal which he has prepared for the University of Chicago, and which now, for the first time, appears in the pages of a CAP AND GOWN. Translated into plain English, the description reads: "A white open book against a maroon phoenix, said open book being outlined in gold."

We learn from history that it took the United States just one hundred and nine years to decide on a suitable seal for the nation. The original committee, consisting of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, and Thomas Jefferson, found it impossible to suit themselves and it was not until they were in their graves and their children's children that our fastidious nation at last adopted the eagle and was satisfied.

Under these circumstances the University of Chicago has done well in choosing a seal after only twenty years of deliberation. The committee, which is made up of Mr. Ryerson, Mr. Hutchinson, and President Judson, reports now that the design offered by Mr. la Rose of a phoenix rising from the ashes of a fire, bearing spread upon its breast an open book has been accepted and made official. On the open book is inscribed the University motto:

"Scientia Crescat; Excolatur Vita!"

"Let knowledge grow from more to more
And so be human life enriched;"

which was originated by our Professor Paul Shorey.

The seal made its first public appearance in the parade of the Spring Athletic Festival of 1910. Its first public appearance in print was in the May, 1912, number of the University of Chicago Magazine. For some months it has been carven on the walls of Harper Library, both in the ceiling of the reading room and over the west door, center of the south pediment.

If the seal choosers worked long, their work was well done. Nothing could be more appropriate than the phoenix and the book. Nothing has been more vividly associated with Chicago than the phoenix. Phoenix-like the new city rose from the ashes of the old, and, phoenix-like, the new University up-reared itself on the ruins of the old University. As for the motto, we cannot but feel that it is just the one which would have been most heartily endorsed by President Harper himself: "Let knowledge grow from more to more and so be human life enriched!"

For the past few summers a large number of undergraduates have taken advantage of the summer courses offered by the Geology department, and have spent an enjoyable and profitable vacation in the out of doors. Last summer the field courses were probably more popular than ever before. All through the summer a geology camp was maintained by the department on the shores of Devil's Lake, near Baraboo, Wisconsin, but the most important event was the Colorado trip, which was taken by over twenty students.

The Colorado geologists left for Ouray about the first of September and were occupied there until the beginning of college in October. Dr. Wallace W. Atwood was in charge of the course, and Dr. Salisbury visited the camp for a few days. The amount of actual good which the student reaps from such a course as the Colorado trip is incalculable. Besides teaching him the truths of geology first hand it offers him a splendid outing. From the number of registrations which have already been made for next summer's field courses it would appear that they are at last coming into a deserved popularity.

TO ALMA MATER

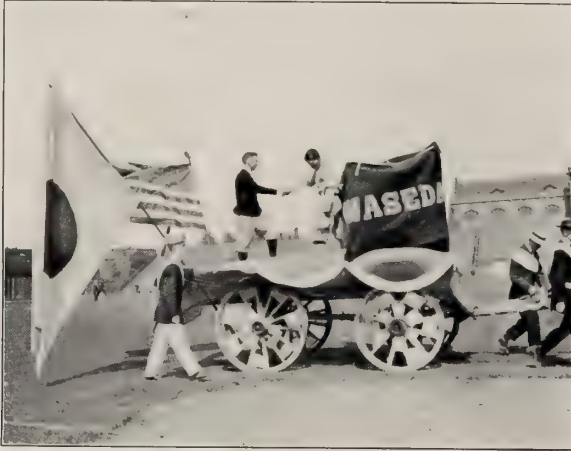

Now the shadows, softly stealing,
Shroud with gray old Mitchell tower;
Now the lyric chimies are pealing,
Ringing in the twilight hour.
So with love our hearts o'erflowing
Sing we Alma Mater's fame.
In a poem ever growing
To the glory of her name.

Tall and straight the Gothic spires
Stand against the darkening skies,
Turrets gleam with fading fires
And the crimson evening dies.
Then we raise the lusty chorus,
Singing Alma Mater's praise,
May her banner long float o'er us.
Strength to her and length of days.

Oxford has its ancient glory,
Paris has its peerless name,
Heidelberg its mellow story
Padua its burning fame.
Yet unwritten is our greatness,
But in western steeps afar,
Fairest gem in heaven's fastness,
Bright with promise gleams our star,
Roderick Teattie.

The Third Annual Athletic Festival

The Spring Athletic Festival which had been washed away by a rain storm the year preceding reappeared on the 3rd of June of last year apparently none the worse for the deluge. It was held at the time of the second game with the Waseda Team, and consequently took on unusual proportions. The boxes which were erected for the occasion were filled with Chicagoans of note. The Governor of the state, and members of his staff, the mayor, and members of the City Council, and many people who have attained fame politically, socially, and otherwise, were present.

The classes paraded in costume, each class drawing a float. A committee of alumni composed of L. Brent Vaughn, D. A. Robertson, and Ralph Cleary awarded the banner for the best class display to 1912, who won the banner at the preceding festival. Honorable mention was awarded the class of 1914 for their excellent turn out.

The program for the Festival consisted of entertainment both for and by the members of the Waseda Team. Sixteen couples performed a Maypole dance. Four of the Japanese, in native costume, did some of their sword dances which were particularly interesting, both because of the unusual character of the dancing and because of the strange songs by which they were accompanied. The annual Law-Medic and Interclass Relay Races were run, the Law team winning the first, and the team representing the class of 1911 winning the second race. The Waseda men had never seen a relay race before, and thought it quite the best form of sport they had ever seen. The Varsity Baseball Team was inhospitable enough to conclude the afternoon's fun by thoroughly trouncing its guests.

THE CAP AND GOWN

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND TWELVE

The Festival was the most successful that has yet been held. There were over two hundred and fifty students in the parade, many more than had taken part in the others. The costumes and floats were better than in the preceding years.

The general sentiment of the students seemed to be: "Here's to our Spring Festivals! May they live long and prosper!"

The Harper Memorial Library

Ground was broken January 10, 1910, four years to a day from the death of President Harper. The corner stone was laid June 14, 1910. Construction has gone steadily forward, interrupted only by the accident to the west tower. It is planned to dedicate the building June 10 and 11, 1912, just two years and a half from the breaking of the ground.

The main features of the building were determined by the report of the Commission of 1902, which made it the central member of the Library Group and placed the reading room at the top and the stacks at the bottom. Besides this it was of course demanded that the building be beautiful, as becomes its memorial character and its commanding place among the University buildings in general, and that, as befits the fact that it is to serve the actual needs of the whole University and is to be a memorial to such a man as President Harper, it be a convenient and efficient workshop.

The great reading room is on the third floor which is the top floor of the middle section of the building, and from this floor bridges lead immediately to the libraries in Haskell and the Law building. The administrative offices and working rooms of the libraries are on the second floor, and other offices and rooms for special collections are provided in the fourth, fifth, and sixth stories of the two towers. The book stacks rest directly on the ground and are carried independently of the building. The first floor is temporarily given up to class rooms and a suite of offices for the President of the University. It will eventually be occupied by stacks. The Historical and Social Science group, whose building is eventually to be built just east of the new building, is for the present given quarters in the east tower. Philosophy and Biology will have their departmental libraries in the west tower, until such time as more permanent quarters can be provided or the space is required for less specialized purposes.

The building has four entrances, three from the quadrangle, one in the center and one in each tower, and one from Fifty-ninth street, in the center of the south side. Of these the west tower entrance is the principal permanent entrance. The public catalogue and delivery desk are on the third floor of this tower. A passenger elevator and two flights of stairs in each tower run the whole height of the building. Electric book-lifts likewise run the whole height of both towers, from lower basement to sixth floor. Pneumatic tubes for the conveyance of book orders and charge cards connect all parts of the building. Speaking tubes and telephones facilitate viva voce communication.

Undergraduate Life

Undergraduate life at the University of Chicago is essentially different from the accepted "college life." True we have football games, classes, green caps for the freshmen, and other things which are familiar to the college student throughout the country; but somehow things seem different.

This difference is quickly noticed by men of other colleges, and is usually explained by saying that "there is no spirit at Chicago." Most of the undergraduates cannot refute this accusation, because they themselves can only feel the difference but do not know what it is. Some explanations are offered, such as "we have not yet had time to create traditions, and this is what the undergraduate life at Chicago lacks." Others say that the trouble lies in the great number of graduate students; still others put the blame on the great number of students living at home.

None of these explanations seem satisfactory. For traditions, we have the "C" bench, the Senior bench, the Senior moustaches, (a tradition rather hard to maintain, because of the embarrassing immaturity it reveals in so many cases), class caps, and other of the customary things in student life. True, we have not Michigan's traditions of "Joe's and the Orient," but it is equally true that we are better off without it. The same thing is true of "the Boneyard" of Illinois and of class rushes. Our "C" bench is a satisfactory substitute for the Yale fence. Lack of tradition cannot explain the difference.

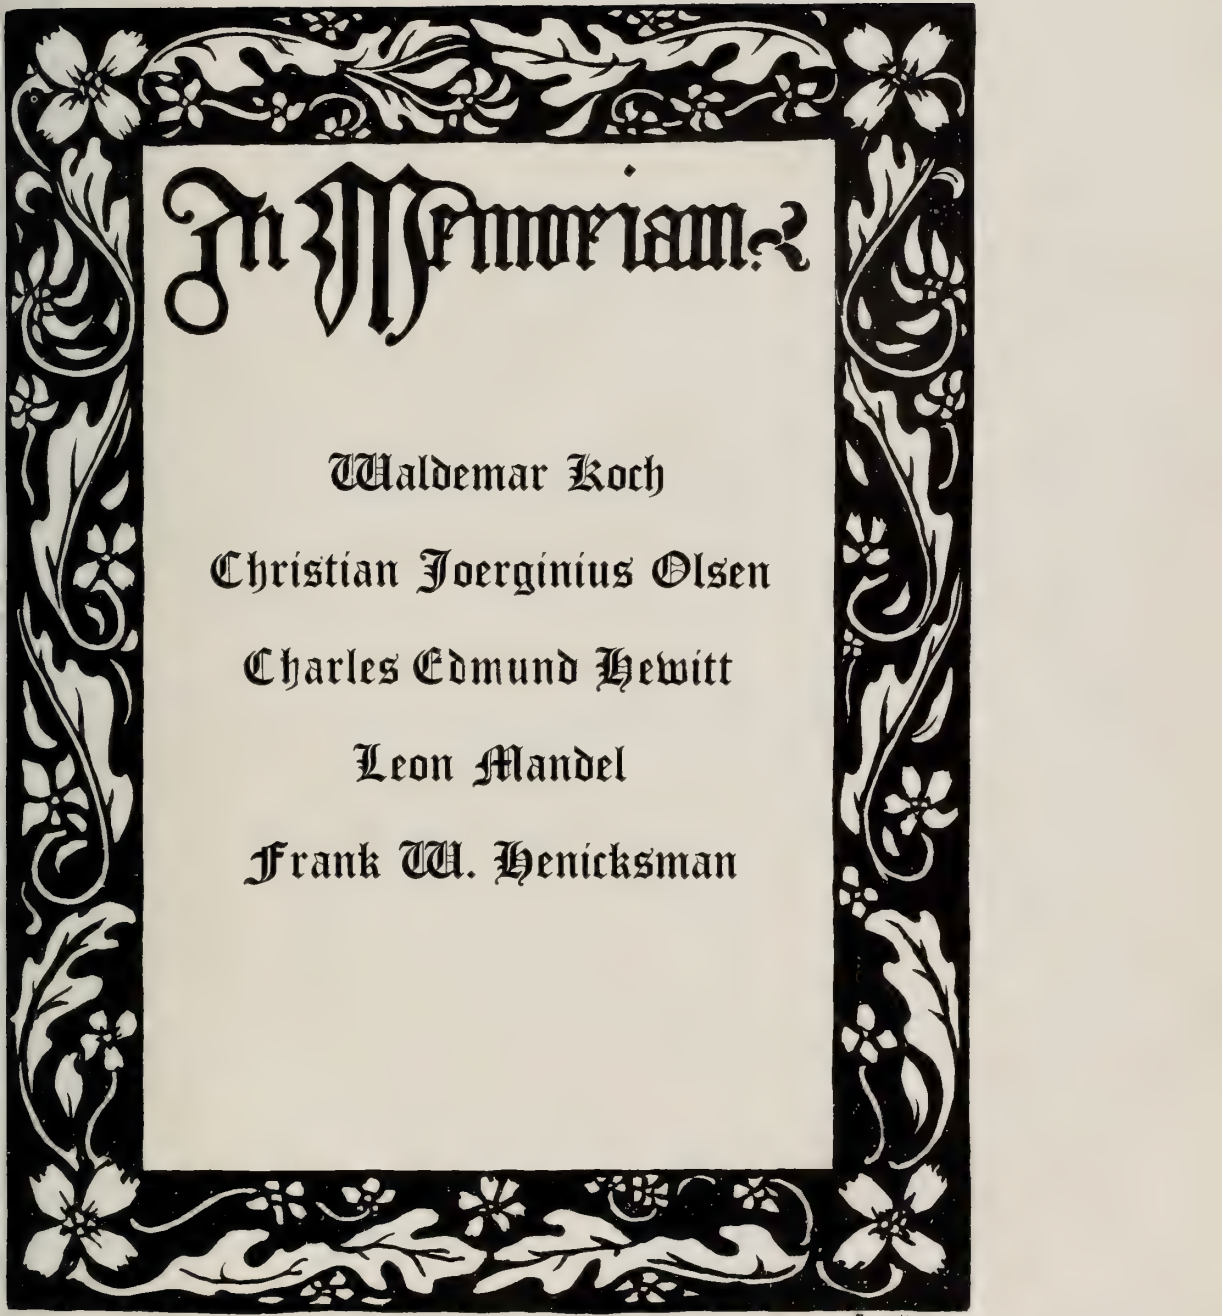

The difference is to be found in the spirit. The accusation that Chicago undergraduates have no spirit is not true; they have a different spirit. The Chicago spirit is not the "rah rah" type, which delights in tearing down barber poles and fences or serve as fuel for bonfires.

Chicago undergraduates go about things differently. A freshman who does not wear his green cap is not brought into line by a ducking in the Botany pond; he is simply branded as one who is not worth while. Men are not compelled to do things at Chicago; they are allowed to them.

The true spirit of Chicago looks to the man, rather than to the institution. The Chicago undergraduate life tends to develop the man, to subserve institutions to him, rather than to subordinate him to the system of undergraduate life; rather than to put him into a great machine where his only chance to be himself is the chance afforded by the machine. This is the true keynote of Chicago spirit.

The freshman wears his green cap. Why? Because some upper classman tells him to do so? Because he will be thrown in the Botany pond, or will have his head shaved if he does not? No. He wears his green hat because it is a good thing for him to do so; because it enables him to recognize his fellow classmen, and to feel the communal impulse which is the heart of undergraduate life at any college. He realizes this, because under the Chicago system, he wears the hat voluntarily.

The undergraduate life at the University of Chicago may be summed up as the life for the man, and sensible traditions, obeyed by the students because it is to the student's own welfare to obey him. Such a system does not make the freshman at once a full spirited Chicago man; but it allows him to grow in the spirit of the University, and it gives him memories which he can retain in after life with no regrets. And this is, after all, the best type that could be desired for undergraduate life at the University of Chicago.

A wide, ornate border of black and white floral and leaf motifs surrounds the central text area. The border features stylized flowers, leaves, and scrolling vines.

The Quadrangle Club

The Quadrangle Club is to the faculty all that the Reynolds Club is to the student body. But it is more; it combines the function of the Reynolds Club and those of a fraternity. It furnishes opportunities for pleasure and gives them the chance to live among congenial colleagues. Some of the faculty make the Quadrangle Club their campus home; a great many live there regularly; and a still larger proportion take some active part in the social and athletic events of the club.

Considerable interest is taken during the summer in a tennis tournament open to all members of the club. The last tournament was won by Mr. Carl Kinsley of the physics department. The Rev. Charles Gilkey was runner-up.

During the past college year, the old custom of giving faculty teas was revived, and in addition to the usual social affairs, during the Fall and Winter quarters four of these receptions were held. The usual dances were given, six during the Fall and Winter quarters. Besides the dances, the club was entertained at a musical concert by Miss Agnes Lapham, pianist, and Miss Lillian White, soprano.

But by far the most important social affair was the annual "Christmas Revels," which was given the evening of Friday, December 22nd. At this function the club was entertained with a comedy, entitled "Everyprofessor," the joint work of Messrs. Linn, Lovett, Angell, Boynton and Richberg. The skit presented the troubles of the average faculty member. The parts in Everyprofessor were taken by Messrs. Gorsuch, Boynton, Gale, Walker, Richberg, Linn and Hancock. The theatricals were followed by dancing.

During the past year the club has been considering the problem of perfecting a better organization, and of putting the finances of the club upon a better basis. Largely through the efforts of such practical economists as Messrs. Wright and Marshall, a new bond issue was successfully floated, and the club finances are in splendid shape.

During the past year the officers of the club have been:

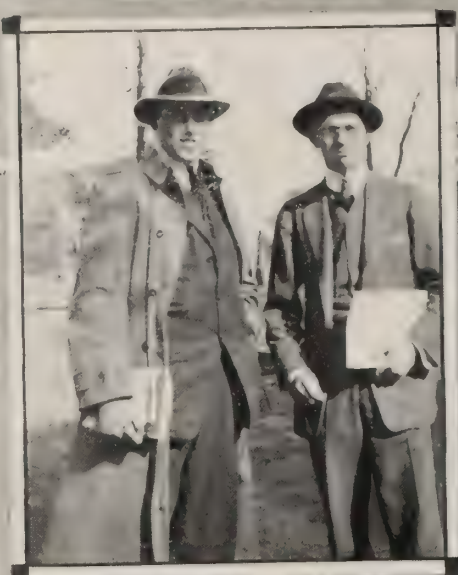

GEORGE H. MEAD - President
 ERNEST FREUND Vice President
 SHERWOOD J. LARNED Secretary

Senior Class History

Innocent and aspiring we sallied hither in the fall of nineteen hundred and eight. We thought then that enlightenment was our aim. The influence of our surroundings soon changed this ideal for many of us. The eyes of some were quickly glittered by the alluring dazzle of college honors, so called, and for these the last four years have been a struggle for notoriety. Others discovered that a good friend, the kind that would rather give than take, meant more to them than anything else. These made friendship their aim and took other things as they came. Perhaps among these are found the truest in our class. Certain it is that they are the ones that have made the bright spots in college for the rest of us. Others of us have stuck to the track and are delving deep into the realms of knowledge for pure love of it. These can tell exactly what they have accomplished in the City Gray while the rest can only guess.

Aside from this difference in ideals we are all alike in that we are seniors. We have rubbed elbows for four years and constant association has made us a unified class. We have faced the same problems together and together we are facing the termination of this association which for most of us has meant happiness and pleasure. If seniordom means anything it means the "end" and this aspect of it is a little sad. Seniordom is popularly supposed to connote dignity but as one reflects on the various individuals in the class of 1912 this idea at once becomes fallacious. The ones who think themselves dignified are the funniest.

Our time has seen some changes in the University. With our entrance came the plague of the honor-points and the terrible havoc and devastation wrought by this dreadful scourge needs no recounting. Scores of us have been stricken and still we are nearly three hundred strong. We have seen the Harper Memorial pass from a dream to a reality. We have seen the Undergraduate Council transformed into an institution of solid worth. Within our memory "classes" have supplanted "colleges" and we have watched these classes gain coherence. We have even seen the University Seal. It seems almost a dream, but it is really with us. We are going away soon, but we have been permitted to taste a little of the inspiration of its motto. Would that we had heeded it better in our time! "Let knowledge grow from more to more and so be life enriched!"

AN HISTORICAL "DRAYMA"

Scene:—The Hall of Fame. Time:—2000 A. D.

A Guide is showing a party of tourists through the art galleries.

The Guide speaks:

Now, please step lively, ladies and gentlemen. We haven't much time left. We are now coming into the section of portraits of the members of the w. k. Class of Nineteen-Thirteen. As you enter, notice the Burne-Jones effect. For the benefit of the ignorant and uncultured members of the party, I will state that Burne-Jones was a man who painted red-haired people. Some historians assert that he and St. Lawrence were the charter members of a mysterious order of crooks known as Lambda Tau Rho, but this has never been verified.

On the right notice the picture of the first president of the class. His name has not come down to us, but archaeologists have identified him by the masterful look in his right eye. Just beyond him is a full length picture of Hiram Langdon Kennicott. He has a stern, yet withal a kindly face. But for a certain crafty expression about the lips and corner of the mouth, he would be the handsomest man whose picture hangs in this room.

Let us walk farther. Here we have a pretty little thing, a portrait of Helen Magee. She is voraciously devouring a large pie. In a recently unearthed copy of a periodical known as The Daily Maroon, there is a very amusing account of her gastronomic feats at a circus held in Lexington gymnasium. The strange looking, auburn-haired man next to her is supposed to be one Norman Paine. You will notice that he is trying to look offended, which accounts for the odd appearance of the picture. Beyond Mr. Paine is a shady canvas which looks more like an impressionistic smear than anything else. You will notice that it is catalogued as a portrait of Milton Morse.

The smiling person in the next portrait is one Donovan, the second president of the class. Notice the mischievous twinkle in his eye. Mr. Donovan is said to have been "too cute for anything." Further details of his history may be found on page 437 of Smith's History. The lady next to Mr. Donovan is supposed to be Miss Cora Hinkins. Her lips are parted in a broad smile. Just why will probably never be known.

Please walk a little faster, ladies and gentlemen. The portraits are very interesting, but our time is growing short.

The man seated at the desk in the next picture is Chester Bell. He is painted in the act of signing a contract with President Harry Pratt Judson for at least seventeen honor—pardon me—grade-points each quarter as long as he desires to remain at the latter's University. Beyond him is Donald Breed, the third president of the class. Observe that his hair is not red. From this we are inclined to believe, either that the painter made an error or else the class made an error in electing him. For further remarks on this interesting question, see Smith's History, page 500.

No, madam, the next portrait is not a picture of the moon rising. It is Hirsch Soble about to deliver an oration. History does not record what he said. A little beyond is the last president of the class—

(The company moves on down the gallery)

CURTAIN

Sophomore Class History

On Friday, September 30th, two years ago, the largest class in the history of the University assembled within the sacred walls of Mandel. Our one object was to begin "doing things." At that time we were more or less bewildered; but who would not be with the glow of the red tape of registration shining on his face. We had decided, of course, to register for a couple of majors of Psychology or Political Economy. Unfortunately all visions of ourselves in regular courses with heads of departments soon faded away. French I, History I, and English I were courses far more suitable for us, to the minds of the deans.

The next great step in our lives was the election of class officers. We decided that Dana Morrison ought to be able to run a class, since he was able to run a football team, and so we elected him president. Melville R. Dall was chosen for vice-president, Ruth Agar, secretary, and Erling H. Lunde, treasurer.

Immediately the historic "1914" parties began. The open house dances were very successful from the host's point of view. Upper classmen attended in large numbers. "1914" has always had the reputation of having the most attractive girls in college. Food usually was lacking at the parties, because "Bill" Lyman and his corps of pie-eaters arrived early.

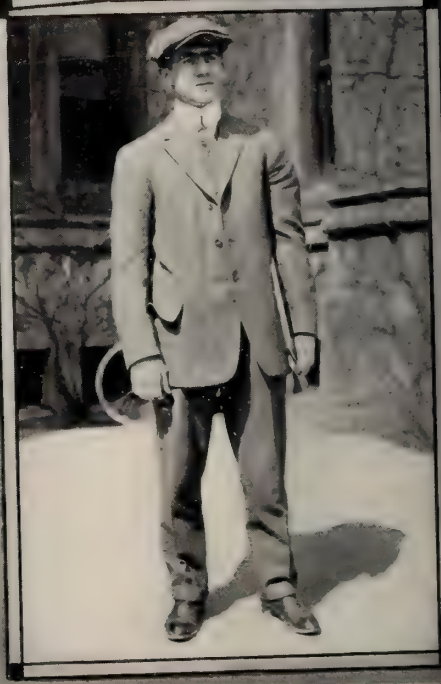

A year from that bright, hopeful September day, we again met on the old Midway; although not with the innocent, trustful hope of the year previous. Our numbers were somewhat depleted. We could no longer call ourselves the largest class in College. Some of us had been cut off from our high collegiate ambitions by little envelopes found on the junior rack.

Shortly before Thanksgiving we began "doing things" for this year. The purity elections took place first, without Havana's as usual. Horace Scrubby, the man Cornell called scrubby for a short, short time, was elected president; Willard P. Dickerson, vice-president; Helene Pollak, secretary and Morton, treasurer. We knew that the latter was O. K.

The deans are still relentlessly continuing their process of elimination among the gay Sophomores, but we are still on deck. You may find "1914" represented in every college activity, from discussing affairs in Cobb at 10:30 to associate editorships on the Maroon. Our motto is "Don't be a grind." But we are all endeavoring to be among the favored ones who will soon take their Associates. We are eager to enter the next sphere of University life, where we shall be safe and as secure as the Berlin Collection in Classical.

Freshman Class History

Of our first coming and the wondrous deeds
Of that great class whose fame now spreads afar
The Freshman Class of Nineteen-Fifteen, known
In Cobb and Lexington and also where Apart in shy retirement Ellis lies,
Sing, Heavenly Muse!

Whereupon the Muse replied that she was busy attending to the Seniors, but we were used to being snubbed by this time and didn't mind. In fact, ever since we came into the University in our trusting youth and newness, we have been snubbed. We have had the feeling from the beginning, however, that we are an unusual class, and the courage of this conviction has carried us triumphantly through many humiliating experiences.

In the first place we registered. That was something to do, believe us! Next, in our extreme infancy, we met and nominated class officers, afterwards electing Kenneth Coutchie president, Edson Finney vice-president, Ruth Allen, secretary, and Stanwood Baumgartner—not Grover—treasurer.

Our first dance was so successful that the upper classmen, who, by the way, attended in droves, were consumed with envy. The dance was held in Bartlett, as a preliminary to the Settlement Dance, and the Freshmen, were found to be able to use their light fantastic toes to excellent advantage. A bright green tag on which his name was written was worn by each Freshman, and this did away with the necessity of formal introductions. Thanks to the excellent management of the social committee, the wall-flowers were few, and everyone had a good time.

Our achievements have been resplendent in athletics too. The freshman football squad did unusually well in practice against the Varsity—at least, so we are told—and the basketball men won words of high approval from Pat Page: "the best material in years." As for the track men, they seem about to run away with all former records. We don't like to seem arrogant, but we can't help feeling that we are really "some class."

The Undergraduate Council

Under our present system at the University of Chicago, the position to be filled by the Undergraduate Council is one of great importance and of far-reaching influence, and in the past year that body has striven hard to adjust itself properly in the campus life. Besides carrying out the routine duties laid down in its Constitution, the Council has taken active interest in such matters as the investigation of the conditions at the Men's Commons and the questionnaire which resulted in a decided gain in both attendance and satisfaction in that direction. The Council also took an active interest in the movement for an honor sentiment among the student body; it boosted the attendance at the University debates by running the ticket sale; it started things moving toward a decided improvement in the Lexington Hall Commons for the women, and endeavored to let the student body know that at all times their Undergraduate Council was "on the job."

The personnel of the Council has been: Robert W. Baird, President; Adelaide Roe, William Warriner, for the Upper Seniors; Thomas Scofield and Cora Hinkins for the Lower Seniors; Ernest Reichmann and Rudy Matthews for the Upper Juniors.

The four class presidents, Clark Sauer, Upper Senior; Donald Breed, Lower Senior; Horace Scruby, Upper Junior; and Kenneth Coutchie, Lower Junior, are members of the Council by virtue of their offices.

In February the Council elections took place, and the present Council consists of Robert W. Baird, President; Clark Sauer, Paul MacClintock and Clara Allen for the Upper Seniors; Donald Breed, Howard McLane, Norman Paine and Effie Hewitt for the Lower Seniors; Horace Scruby, Howell Murray and Earle Shilton for the Upper Juniors; and Kenneth Coutchie, John Baker and Louise Mick for the Lower Juniors.

ORGANIZATIONS

At the annual meeting, March 4, 1911, the officers elected were: Richard Frederick Teichgraeber, president; Ralph James Rosenthal, vice-president; Arthur Dale O'Neill, secretary; Paul Mallers Hunter, treasurer; and Kent Chandler, librarian.

To the incoming Freshman the Reynolds Club this year makes its appeal as of former seasons. To the older men the changes in library, billiard room and bowling alley will seem doubly appealing in the light of a diligently pursued program of Club improvement. The shades of 1911 bore away the historically conspicuous remnant of floorcovering in the reading room, leaving as an heritage several new and handsome Scotch rugs. Incidentally let the student remember that the latter are free of mortgage or even the taint of installments. A step inside the door reveals the lobby floor graced by the addition of a beautiful Persian Sarouk rug. Devotees of the ivories, including for the most part probationers or soon-will-bes, have been rejoicing over the complete refurbishing of accessories for this billiard and pocket-billiard department.

The picture of the bowling alley, elsewhere on these pages, is self-explanatory. Inevitably the barren whitewash of the walls was to go, inasmuch as it was completely out of harmony with the other panelled walls. The officers determined to hasten the inevitable, and they did. The empanelling with a mission wood seems to perfect the entire plan of Club architecture.

What has been done socially? In the spring of 1911 the club was honored by having as its guests at a smoker the visiting baseball team of the Waseda University of Japan, decidedly a novelty. Smokers and informal dances occurred as usual. The Formal was made as informal as possible, and the Hard Times Party harder than ever. However the social events culminated in the very successful reception given to President and Mrs. Judson, members of the Faculty, and friends of the University. One thousand were present according to The Daily Maroon; fifteen hundred according to the Honorable Did-More Hearst's esteemed Examiner; while the W. G. N. threw in an extra 500 and made it an even two thousand. Choose your partners gentlemen! The fire-places were all burning, affording a delightfully cheerful and informal atmosphere to the evening. The entire tower group of buildings was flung open for use. And the Band and Glee Glub played and sang with characteristic excellence.

Next year will mark a decade of faithful if tigerish devotion to the Club's interest for the steward, Mr. English, at which time a celebration is planned in his honor. Mr. D. St. John Gough, a new arrival at the desk, is well liked by all. Mr. Bratfish continues the more than satisfactory tonsorialist. (Apologies to the Police Gazette). James and Oscar are still passing out the cigars. James has been in the service of the Club since its founding some ten or more years ago. Oscar's record fails of this by but a few months. And Allen and Nathan give customary trouble as the cute little pin setters.

At the regular annual meeting, March 1, 1912, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

With perennial modesty, the men who this year comprise the Pen Club style themselves "amateur journalists and litterateurs." "Amateur" speaks for itself; the justification of "journalists" lies in the fact that the editors of The Daily Maroon and THE CAP AND GOWN grace the club with their presence; and "litterateurs" is used with a timid rising inflection to cover those of the elect who have "had stuff printed" or look as though they should have had.

Besides meeting to have their picture taken, the members enjoyed a series of three dinners, at each of which a prominent literary man was the guest of the club. Associate Professor Starr was entertained at the first dinner of the season, and spoke on "The Writings of a Traveller." Occasionally the men have met informally in the Reynolds Club or elsewhere to smoke and talk in the approved literary fashion. On one memorable night the members feasted about the long table in The Maroon office, which was candle-lighted for the occasion—not for "effect," but because the electric lights expire at midnight.

The very fact that the members so constantly meet in pursuance of their work on University publications had made the Pen Club give keen enjoyment to its members. With increasing age, it is expected that the club's scope and purpose will widen, and that it will indeed furnish a haven for the literary fledgling.

Like so many other things that have been for some time, The Commercial Club started some time ago at a very early age. Supposedly, its members were a number of enterprising collegers whose cranial activity was not entirely devoted to academic cogitation, but found an ample sufficiency of time to lucubrate upon the problems of the mighty silver sinker—the American dollar.

And thus the Commercial Club, an institution of embryo financiers (very embryonic) grew to be a factor in college life. Its members were CAP AND GOWN business managers, business managers of The Daily Maroon, and captains of many other treasuries of campus organizations. They assembled bi-weekly at the Commons private dining-room where at Mr. Barrells' sumptuous board, they entertained various successful business men of the city, who offered them sage advice, and fired their young imaginations with suggestions and ambitions, working toward which has caused many a member to be fired otherwise. However, the members have listened to and appreciated many a splendid talk from men whose positions in the business world were more than well established.

I have said that the organization comprised fellows who were embryonic financiers. The fact remains—most of them were so embryonic in financial pursuits that they forgot to pay their dues. Yet we still believe in the Club. It has afforded many an opportunity for fellows to satisfy themselves as to how to go to work, as to the value of a college education, as to the place of the college man in the business community. It gives the members a chance to come into close contact with men who really know and do things—who have been through a more difficult schooling than college. Moreover the interest that is taken in the Commercial Club by business men themselves is evidenced by the fact that they invariably remember the men to whom they have spoken, and that indirectly through the Commercial Club several men who have completed their college work have found their life positions. The Club is more firmly established now than ever before, and its work is growing accordingly.

Just three years ago the Neighborhood Clubs came into existence. Under the supervision of Miss Eva Robinson, whose enthusiasm and perseverance made these organizations possible, the four clubs gradually grew, year after year, until now the clubs have together a membership of some three hundred and fifty women.

Commendable work has been done in these three short years. For the homesick girl boarding off the campus, it has found sympathetic companions; for the intellectual girl seeking broader culture it has been instructive; for the studious girl it has been a place of recreation, where work is forgotten and where fun abounds. Several trips of invaluable results have been taken, including Hull House, the Public Library and Marshall Field & Company's Wholesale department. Taking it all in all, the Neighborhood Clubs have more than lived up to their standards of previous years.

At the Thanksgiving spread five hundred and fifty women, an unprecedented number, sat at the festive board. At the Winter Picnic in the gymnasium a hundred women lunched together. And at the Faculty Party, held in the Spring Quarter the attendance and enthusiasm were marvellous.

The officers have worked hard and conscientiously and the success of the clubs is due to the untiring energy of Miss Robinson and the cooperation of every member.

The year 1911-12 has been a very busy and happy one in the Young Women's Christian League. One of the most pleasant memories of the spring quarter of 1911 is the house party at Lake Bluff in which the newly appointed officers and committee chairmen joined with the members of the outgoing cabinet. Plans for the work of the coming year were discussed, and marshmallow toasts, hay rack rides, tramps through the woods, and other good times helped establish the good fellowship and friendship which have characterized the work of the year. May brought the Quadrangle Fete, at which each of the four college classes strove to outdo the others in the beauty of its booth, and the attractiveness of its refreshments. Another happy memory of the spring quarter is the Geneva dinner, at which Geneva songs and stories made every girl present eager for the ten days of tent life, outdoor fun, acquaintance with students from other colleges, and sane and genuine inspiration, which the annual summer conference at Lake Geneva affords. Twenty-six girls attended this conference in August.

The first weeks of the autumn quarter were devoted to welcoming new girls, and helping them during the puzzling first days when everything is new. Informal teas in the League Room each afternoon made it easy to become acquainted, and the Freshman Frolic Supper, attended by over four hundred girls, and followed by a jolly play in Kent theatre, made the Freshmen feel that they were well entered upon their college life. Close upon the Freshman Frolic followed the reception to all new students, given jointly by the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian League, and during the latter part of October all new women students were entertained at a reception in honor of the pastors of the neighborhood churches. Another most delightful afternoon was spent in the home of the president and Mrs. Judson, who entertained in honor of the new members of the League. Thanksgiving was celebrated by taking bags of fruit, candy and nuts to each member of the Home for Incurables. At Christmas the League joined with the Neighborhood Clubs and the Women's Athletic Association in a Christmas party, which resulted in over eighty filled stockings for the children of Frederick Douglas Center. In the Winter Quarter came the eighth annual Membership Dinner.

Throughout the year the League has co-operated with the University in the classes offered for the study of the Bible and modern and social missionary movements, and has offered a few courses in these subjects for those unable to take the curriculum work. Largely attended morning meetings have been held each week, at which vital subjects have been sanely discussed by competent leaders. Afternoon meetings addressed by leaders in the modern social and missionary movements have been held twice each quarter, by the graduate women of the League.

Trips to social centers in the city have been taken in connection with these meetings.
Members of the League have been assisting throughout the year in Hull House, the University Settlement, Hyde Park Center, and the Home for Incurables.
With 1912 the Young Women's Christian League celebrates the twentieth anniversary of its founding. It enters upon its third decade with confidence that the years to come will see a constantly increasing effectiveness in its work of expressing and developing Christianity among the women of the University.

In recognition of the scientific principle that "adaptation to environment" is as essential to the vigorous life of organization as to the life of organisms, the plans and work of the University Young Men's Christian Association have been modified and arranged to more fully meet the conditions of student life, and the University scheme of organization membership has been put upon a personal basis. A new plan of organization recognizing the natural grouping of students in classes and schools has been devised.

This organization consists of one unified association with members from all colleges and schools of the University. Out of these members commissions are appointed in each of the undergraduate classes and in such graduate schools as the work develops in. The chairmen of these commissions constitute a Student Executive Council, with power to correlate the work throughout the University. The work is administered by an administrative Council, composed of representatives from the Faculty, Alumni, friends, and students, the chairmen of the commissions serving as the student representatives on this Administrative Council.

"Politics boils and politics bubbles,
Runs over the brim and puts out the fire."

With one of the most heated presidential campaigns for many years occupying the limelight of current events, it is only natural that the political smudge on the campus should this year be easily fanned into a roaring blaze. The first burst was the spontaneous organization of the Nonpartisan Political Club, which suggested the taking of a presidential straw-ballot among all the students. Its members aided The Daily Maroon in this undertaking, which incidentally resulted as follows: Roosevelt, 203; Wilson, 134; Taft, 70; LaFollette, 68; with a number of also-rans.

Possessing all the traits, purposes and ideals of the permanent political organization, i. e., The Commonwealth Club, a consolidation of the two was effected and the name Commonwealth Club preserved. It is all-inclusive, aiming at neither creed nor factions, but to promote a healthy student interest in the politics of the day. As subsidiary organizations, the roster includes The Progressive Republican Club, The Taft Club, and The Wilson Club. Speakers from the several party headquarters have addressed numerous massmeetings.

The Student Volunteer Band

When you have said foreign missions you have raised and lowered the curtain, so far as the Volunteer Band is concerned. Its ideal, its sole and avowed purpose is the awakening and maintaining among the University students an intelligent, active interest in foreign missions; making them feel the call of barbarian tribes of the southern countries.

The Band is a part of the Student Volunteer Movement of the United States and Canada, which seeks to enroll an adequate number of volunteers for the demands of the foreign mission boards of North America, and to prepare these candidates for their life work.

Le Cercle Français

Les membres du cercle se réunissent une fois par semaine, pour prendre une tasse de thé et bavarder comme de vraies Parisiennes. Chaque semaine on varie le programme qui termine la réunion-un jour ce sont des jeux français, un autre des chansons paysannes-quelquefois on passe la soirée au théâtre-ou bien on fait une partie de cartes.

Tout se passe en français, bien entendu; jamais on ne commet l'erreur de prononcer un mot en langue barbare.

Les membres de la Faculté des langues romanes viennent de temps en temps, et par leurs descriptions, leur conversation, ajoutent une note de couleur locale aux réunions et en relèvent le ton.

C'est grâce à eux que le cercle a rassemblé cette année un nombre de membres plus grand que jamais, et que ses efforts ont été couronnés de succès.

A niche in the Hall of Fame, an undisputed place among the great writers, mayhap a staff position on some modern magazine, and if the worst comes to the worst a creditable showing in the rigorous official courses, English Four and Five! Each member at least expects to see her story in a magazine, and each would persuade her associates that she believes their stories will be accepted too.

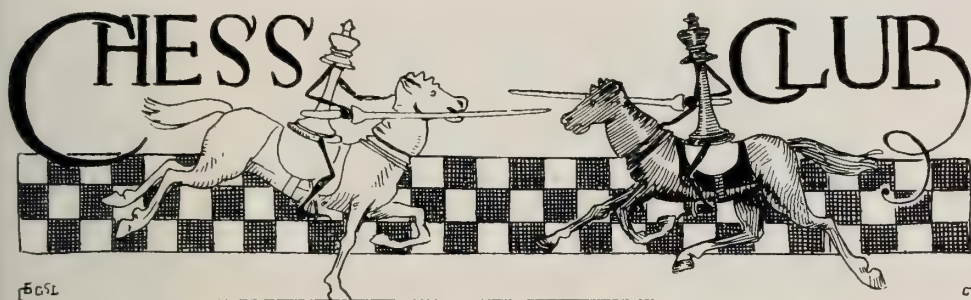

After four years of varied existence, studying the short story of current magazines and of standard literature, and listening to talks on "How To Do It" by short story writers who have achieved, and critics who can tell amateurs how to succeed, the Short Story Club has been rejuvenated to try its own hand at its own short stories. Thus the club has become a rival and no mean rival at that, of the men's organization, which even belligerents revere, The Pen Club. At every meeting two members present original squibs to be haggled over, ripped and eventually moulded into an acceptable story.

Laskers and Capablanecas do not sprout like weeds. Yet they are inevitably produced, and who can tell but that we have one in our midst. Since the establishment of the Chess Club, November 24, 1911, absent-minded trysters, their heads chock full of moves and strategies, have infested the campus. Classes have been regularly cut, lessons and other tasks neglected, but this valuable and intense training of the human mind flourishes unabated.

Although not the first organization in the history of the University of the Knights of the Chessboard—similar clubs having existed spasmodically for years—it nevertheless promises to be the most permanent and effective. With the endorsement of the Reynolds Club, wherein the trysters battle, a University Championship Meet is to be undertaken. At present writing a match with the University of Michigan is being held.

Varsity Debate

*We like a wight who, when he gets a solar pleck,
Leaves explanatory piffle, and just takes it in the neck.*
We indulge no explanations among the clouded issues. We fully realize with the cynic, J. Pierpont Morgan, that "you can't unscramble 'em after they're once scrambled." Yet we are c2k whether the two decisions this year, disasters for Chicago, were won at Aviation Meets or lost on terra firma.

The seriousness of Robinson, the fire of Simes and the emphasis of Jones were thwarted by the Spartan defense of the Northwesterners. The firmness of Jennings, the southern oratory of Mullins and Nebraska breezes from Foster succumbed to the onslaught of the Michiganders. Perchance Chicago's digestion and assimilation of methods and characteristics were poor. While the efforts of our opponents were mostly astronomic, the difficulty with old "C" was mostly gastronomic.

A few castles concerning next year's chances are to the point. We lost this year but that has happened before. Such an unexpected result will only spur next year's men to fight. And precisely as Stagg's football warriors came back this year to their own after the disastrous season of 1910, just so may our debaters of 1913 be relied upon to restore Chicago's fitting prestige in forensics.

The question: Resolved, That the Recall Should Be Adopted for all Elective State and Municipal Officers, Except Judges.

In Leon Mandel Assembly Hall, January 19, 1912: Chicago Affirmative—Edward Everett Jennings, Arthur Eugene Mullins, George Nimmons Foster. Michigan Negative—Cram, Fixel, Collins. Presiding—Professor Charles E. Merriam for constructive arguments, Professor Halliday of the University of Illinois for rebuttals. Judges—Lindley W. Morris, attorney in Toledo, O., Professor J. L. Gillin of the University of Iowa, John F. Holland, attorney in Chicago. Time-keeper—John Clinton Searle.

At Evanston, same night: Northwestern Affirmative—Bergusson, Lefever, Sellers. Chicago Negative—James William Robinson, Lewis Mallalien Simes Franklin Daniel Jones. Presiding—James A. Patten. Judges—President Guy Potter Benton of the University of Vermont, S. S. Gregory, attorney in Chicago, Professor Thomas A. Clark, Dean of Men at the University of Illinois. Time-keeper—Merrill Isaac Schnebly.

Charles F. McElroy, '06, was the official coach. Harold G. Moulton, '07, instructor in the department of Economics, and Paul M. O'Dea, student in the Law School, assisted the coach. All three have been on championship debating teams for Chicago.

Excepting Jennings, who is enrolled in the Divinity School, Chicago's debaters were recruited from the Law School. All had had previous experience.

Unprecedented attendance, both as to size and enthusiasm, marked the Mandel Hall contest. Ticket-selling was taken officially in charge by the Undergraduate Council, and a good deal of pepper was instilled through the efforts of Earle Shilton, '14.

Percentage statistics of the Central Debating League:

	Michigan		Chicago		Northwestern
	Won	Lost	Won	Lost	Won	Lost
1907	2	0	0	1	1	1
1908	2	0	1	1	0	2
1909	1	1	1	1	1	1
1910	1	1	2	0	0	2
1911	1	1	1	1	1	1
1912	2	0	0	2	1	1
Total	9	3	5	7	4	8
Percentage	750		.416		.333

The Freshman-Sophomore Debate

With the customary slogan, "Beat the Sophomores," the yearling orators confidently planned to put the Sophomore debaters in a closed shop. But as usual the Sophomores refused to be put, winning the second annual interclass contest by a unanimous decision.

Question: Resolved, That the Closed Shop is Preferable to the Open Shop in the United States.

Time and Place: February 5, 1912, North Room of the Law Building.

Freshman Affirmative: CHARLES K. LEVIN, CLYDE E. WATKINS, NATHAN FINE.

Sophomore Negative: MORRIS I. FEIWELL, GEORGE F. FISKE, JR., CHESTER F. DUNHAM.

Presiding: ARTHUR E. MULLINS.

Judges: EDWARD A. SIMES, Assistant Professor of Philosophy; CHESTER W. WRIGHT, Assistant Professor of Economics; CARL F. HUTH, Instructor in History.

Coaches: JAMES T. HAVILAND, Sophomores; PAUL M. O'DEA, Freshmen.

ASSOCIATE EDITORS, CAP AND GOWN

The University of Chicago Magazine

In December 1911, the Alumni Council of the University decided to turn over the editorial conduct of the Magazine to a larger Board, which should represent more fully the various generations of alumni. The new Board as first appointed, consisted of Harry Arthur Hansen, '09, who had previously been in general charge of the Magazine's affairs, David Allan Robinson, '02, and James Weber Linn, '97, chairman. To this Board at a special meeting there were later added Cyrus Leroy Baldridge, '11, and Frank Winans Dignan, '97. Mr. Horace Spencer Fiske, the assistant recorder of the University, acts with this Board as an Associate Editor in charge of the University Record.

Since the consolidation of the old Record with the old Alumni Magazine, the University of Chicago Magazine had been issued six times a year. The new Board increased the number of issues to nine (monthly, October-June inclusive). It retained in general the previous form of the Magazine, but adopted a rigid policy of giving prominence exclusively to alumni matters and articles of interest to the alumni. As heretofore the Magazine publishes the convocation addresses, which are thus retained in a permanent record. It divides into various departments—special articles, editorial comment and chronicle, letters from alumni, the University Record Alumni news, and undergraduate affairs. It has been issued on the fifteenth of each month; beginning with the May issue, however, it will appear on the tenth of each month of publication. The Magazine is at present supported by a subsidy from the University, and by subscriptions. As soon as the subscription list warrants so doing, the Magazine will be published without subsidy, and wholly as an alumni organ. Since January the subscription list has doubled, and the increase shows no sign of being temporary. A plan is being considered which would put every graduate on the subscription list of the Magazine for one year from the time of his or her graduation. If this idea is carried out, within five years we may expect a list of bona fide subscribers which would render the Magazine entirely self-supporting, and enable it to contribute largely to the support of the Association.

The Magazine prints no fiction (except by inadvertence in the editorial comment) and no poetry; it is typographically the equal of any similar publication in the country; and all it needs is a wider circulation to become of real importance and interest. Its business affairs are in charge of F. W. Dignan, the secretary of the Alumni Association.

The Daily Maroon

The high standard of the Daily Maroon has been upheld this year by Walter J. Foute, Hiram L. Kennicott, and Merl W. Reese, and is considered throughout the country as ranking with the best. The business end of the paper has been taken care of by Ralph J. Rosenthal and Earl R. Hutton, who managed THE CAP AND GOWN last year. Early in the Winter Quarter Ralph Rosenthal left the University to go into the advertising business, and the paper was financed by Earl Hutton alone during the Winter Quarter. At the end of the Winter Quarter Earl Hutton was graduated from the University, and in the Spring Quarter the paper was managed by Hutton and William Bickle in conjunction.

Merl W. Reese acted as athletic editor through the Fall Quarter, and then went into business. Since that time most of the athletic work has been taken care of by B. W. Vinissky, one of the associate editors.

The Women's department was first edited by Margaret Campbell who later resigned to be succeeded by Sarah Reinwald. Besides the editor there have been five reporters at work in the Women's office in Lexington Hall with the result that the Society Column, Women's athletics and events around Lexington in general have been well taken care of.

It was deemed advisable to divide the paper into departments such as campus, drama, lectures, etc., with the idea that an associate editor should perfect himself in this one line, following out the general idea so rampant at present that specialization is advantageous. The Gargoylette column was superseded by "R. Jay's" and "Hoos, Hoots, and Sighs."

Several things have been featured during the year such as a special Christmas edition, and the placing of boxes in the corners of the front page. The printing was done by the McElroy Publishing Company.

The First Alumni Reunion

On the evening of April 21, the first annual reunion of Dramatic Club Alumni took place. Dinner was served in the Commons' cafe to members, associates, and some twenty alumni. After dinner, David Allan Robertson addressed the company on the subject of the early history of the Club. At eight-thirty the party broke up and attended a private performance in the Reynolds Club theatre. Some three hundred guests were present and the hall was full to overflowing. The bill comprised three one-act plays.

"Modestie"

A comedy in one act by Paul Hervieu, translated by Barrett H. Clark.

MRS. FARRELL	- - - - -	Winifred Cutting

This production of the Bernard Shaw sketch was the first in America; considerable interest was shown in the play too, as it had been censored in England for political reasons.

“Joy” and “Press Cuttings”

“Why in the world did they give it, this play ‘Joy’?” exclaimed the w. k. member of the faculty as the curtain descended in graceful folds to shut off the picture of the last act of Mr. Galsworthy’s play.

“Got me!” exclaimed the ubiquitous undergrad.

“A miserable choice,” was the comment of the scornful highbrow.

“They made love beautifully,” said the blushing maiden who sold candy.

“Fairly decent acting, but wasted on a poor play,” said the critic of the Chicago Evening Times.

“They did their best,” said the crude but honest Daily Maroon.

Such and other criticisms would seem to stamp “Joy” as the “bete noire” of the Dramatic Club, yet it was really a highly creditable performance of an unpretentious, atmospheric playlet, and, as a picture of a hot summer day, it was a marked success.

With “Press Cuttings” it was different. The delicious witticisms of Shaw’s beautiful little satire were a trifle lost in Mandel, though they had “gone across” very successfully in the Reynolds club theatre. Those who were familiar with “Press Cuttings” were loud in praises. Those who had neither seen nor read it were less enthusiastic, but admitted that it was clever.

The members of the casts of the two plays were as follows:

The Dramatic Club Dinners

During the past two years, monthly dinners, usually held in the Commons café, have been features of the club. Early last year Professor Clark was the guest of the club at the first of these functions and read Henry Arthur Jones' "Dolly Reforming Herself;" at the same dinner Professor Robertson gave a talk. At other meetings of the kind that year Professor Henri David, Professor Boynton, and Professor Linn gave talks on dramatic subjects. Early in the present year, Professors Linn and Robertson gave talks, and on January 29 Professor Robert Herrick related some of his experiences in the theaters of France and Spain.

Friday, March 1, the club entertained Mr. Fred O'Donovan and Miss Sara Allgood, of the Irish Players, at a lunch given in the commons cafe. A large number of the faculty were present, among them Mr. Herrick, Mr. Boynton, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hale, Mr. Manly, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Gale, Miss Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hill, Mrs. Flint, Mr. Tarbell, Mr. W. P. Gorsuch, and Mrs. MacClintock. Mr. Herrick and Mr. Boynton made short speeches, while Mr. O'Donovan and Miss Allgood expressed appreciation for the kindness extended to them by universities all over the country, and especially the University of Chicago.

On Thursday, March 21, the club entertained Mr. and Mrs. John Galsworthy at a select dinner in the Hutchinson dining-room.

On Saturday, April 20, the annual Alumni Dinner was held followed by a performance of three one act plays in the Reynolds Club Theatre.

It is a year now since the calcium lights on old Mandel's stage shone out on Calypso, but we have not forgotten her, and we never shall, we believe. Perhaps when some of us get very old and our memory processes are not nearly as acute as Mr. Hayes explains them, we shall have forgotten just exactly all we saw, where we sat, whom we were with, and what we wore; perhaps some of us will be decrepit so in mind as not to associate our vari-coloured memories with a Blackfriar production and to those it may seem to be a beautiful, fantastic dream, dreamed away back in the Arcadian days of college; but to us all there will come a memory at some time or another, of the gay joyousness and brilliancy of it all, of the delight we had, and then we will restage Calypso and enjoy it all over again. How queer they will be—all those miniature stages fitted out in people's heads. Why, even now the figures swarm around us, the myriad lights all come out again, the gay crowd, and the throbbing music—they are all there on our memory stage. A few familiar 'shades' pass us—here is Billy Merrill now! What a famous old actor he has become, and he's better every time he appears! Let's see, he has been a "prima donna" for several successful seasons, and his (Pardon me—her) gowns are marvels. A finished society lady—Mrs. Chichester—with your aristocratic and somewhat blasé demeanor! We like the way you have acquired the habit of feeling the back of your coiffure, and frizzing back the loose ends.

But look! Here is Baukhage! How could we miss him! The same old Buck! In former productions, he has always been irresistibly funny and hasn't disappointed us now. Oh no, he's only better than ever, aren't you, Mr. Policeman?

How familiar they all look. I really believe—but listen, what's that? Why it sounds so wierd; surely it is our orchestra playing and yet—!!

The Greek Dancers—!!—Too wonderful to be real, we say; and we pinch ourselves and are a little dubious as to whether we are dreaming or not.

Ah Calypso! Seducing, capturing Calypso! Are you real or not? A god dess we would call you in your deep rainbow scarfs. Again that music, that strange, haunting rhythm!

But behold the dance! Enter a god, a hero—the dance. Ye gods, how they dance! There is something within us that sings and bounds, an exultation, a joy. Never have we seen the like of it, and we can hardly keep back the 'bravo' that rises to our lips, while deep in our hearts is another bravo for Miss Hinman, for Mr. tothart and Messrs. Benzies, Baukhage, Myers, Bowlby and Stapp. They have all gone down in that record of fame which we keep within our appreciative selves—these authors, directors, and those two marvellous dancers, Frank Parker and Curtis Rogers.

Adieu! Adieu, we say, for our lights begin to grow dim on our memory stage, and a haze drops down over the swaying choruses. The music becomes a murmur and then ceases. It is over—our re-enactment, and we are sad, sad, and yet happy, for we never, never shall forget.

The German Plays

While other organizations have been busy producing plays the German Club has not been asleep. On May 5, 1911, the club gave two one act plays, "Geburts-tags Freuden," by H. Arnold, and "Als Verlobte Empfehlen Sich," by E. Wichert. The Reynolds club theatre where the plays were given was well crowded, and the plays themselves, according to Dramatic club members who understood German, were very successful. Miss Winifred Cutting, who has several times appeared in German Club plays, was the star of the occasion.

The French Play

On March eighth an audience of guests interested in French, gathered in the theater of the Reynolds club to enjoy a presentation of "La Poudre aux Yeux," a comedy in two acts by Labiche and Martin. It is a clever little play, full of humor and amusing situations which arise through the ingenuity of Madame Ratinois and Madame Malingera. Ethel Groat and Gertrude Emerson caught the spirit of the game of "throwing dust into the eyes" of one another and assuming an ease and knowledge of the world of music and art which neither they nor their families possessed. Their attempts to lead their husbands into the shady and intricate paths of social custom seemed for a time successful. But Lander MacClintock as Monsieur Ratinois and Howard Roe as Monsieur Malingear finally asserted their rights and insisted upon absolute honesty as a basis for the marriage of their children, Frederic Ratinois and Emmeline Malingear.

The careful coaching of Mr. L. W. Parker of the French Department received its deserved appreciation and the members of the two French Clubs seemed thoroughly pleased with "La Poudre aux Yeux."

The Masquers

Through the suggestion of Miss Wallace, the Freshman Girl's Dramatic society, The Masquers, was organized in the fall quarter of the year nineteen hundred and twelve. Its object was to foster and stimulate the dramatic tendencies and talents of the Freshman girls, and to encourage them to observe technicalities of the drama, and to prefer good stagecraft to bad.

Now the club is flourishing. It has a number of members who expect to re-organize it next year as a Sophomore dramatic club. At its meetings original sketches and monologues are given, and criticism offered.

MUSIC

Our New Musical Director

University circles have been aroused and enthused the past year by a new musical uplift. Mr. Robert Waterman Stevens has long been known by the professional musicians of Chicago as a concert pianist, organist and teacher of the highest order. Associated as student and teacher with Zeisler, Godowsky, Pratt, Sherwood, Gleason and Clarence Eddy, also with special honors from Theodore Thomas, Frederick Stock, Damrosch, Paderewski and Guilman, his successes have been brilliant. He has appeared as soloist under the batons of Theodore Thomas, Emil Oberhoffer, Max Bendix, Arthur Mees and Adolph Rosenbecker.

In addition to distinction in the world of professional musicians, it is a remarkable fact that his popular hold upon the University students has been equally strong. Hardly had Mr. Stevens taken charge of our musical interests than things began to move. In the incredibly short time of one month, he gathered a chorus of seventy-five voices, trained them to sing the 13th Psalm of Liszt and was ready for its performance by the Centennial of that composer, achieving one of the greatest artistic successes in the history of the University.

From that occasion, in which scores were turned away from Mandel Hall, has been felt an overflow of musical spirit in various channels. The Men's Choir has attained a standard that is attracting marked attention from friends and strangers. Mr. Stevens also took charge of the Glee Club at a critical point one week from the home concert, and carried that occasion to a successful issue. The singing of the women is also receiving the attention it deserves and the credit classes of music are being organized on a sane and practical basis. Altogether the University is not unmindful of the desire of its patrons for more culture and proper acknowledgement of credit in musical ways, for it is showing to Mr. Stevens a decided spirit of encouragement in his work and appreciation of his splendid early efforts.

Having found the right man, our authorities, student body and community are glad to go on under his leadership in the art that more than any other, brightens life and gives zest and spirit to the student.

The University Orchestral Association

The season 1911-12 was the third and most successful season of the University Orchestral Association. Practically the entire seating capacity of Leon Mandel hall was sold during the season ticket sale and for the special concerts the seating capacity of the stage was taxed to the limit. In addition to the six concerts by the Theodore Thomas Orchestra under the direction of Frederick Stock, there were recitals by Wilhelm Bachaus, pianist, and Allessandro Bonci, tenor.

On the afternoon preceding each concert, a lecture-recital was given on the concert program in Mandel hall by Mr. Robert W. Stevens, director of music in the University. These lecture-recitals were free to patrons of the concerts and were very helpful in interpreting and enjoying the program of the following afternoon.

The members of the association, of which there are a hundred, have found that their original purpose, that of guaranteeing the financial success of the concerts, was unnecessary because of the spontaneous support of the University neighborhood.

THE MEN'S GLEE CLUB

During the last year the Glee Club has enjoyed a good season, both financially and artistically. The club has endeavored to break away from the old stereotyped performances, go in for numbers of a lighter, more popular nature, and its greatest use on the campus at campus affairs, such as the Settlement Dance, Reynolds Club Smokers, receptions, etc.

The former practice of taking a long trip during some vacation has been discountenanced by the faculty, and while this removes from the Glee Club the greater part of the pleasure and reward, still a number of men stood by the club and enabled it to finish its season satisfactorily. In place of a Spring trip, the management of the club will present each number of the Glee Club with a fob as an emblem, and this practice may be continued as an annual custom.

A few concerts about town were given during the Fall and Winter and the season closed with the Home Concert given in Mandel, March 9, 1912. In the concert the new idea of making it a strictly campus affair was emphasized. The newly organized mandolin club assisted, and the Bacchanale from the Blackfriars was introduced as a specialty. The concert appeared to meet with the approval of the audience, and the change in policy will probably be followed out hereafter.

The personnel of the club for 1911-12 was as follows:

The Senior Prom

On the night of February nineteenth over a hundred and fifty couples gathered in Bartlett Gymnasium to enjoy the seventeenth annual Prom in all its glory. The decorations consisted of a canopy of red and white ribbons stretched across the hall in checker-board fashion. Below this hung maroon pennants, plain ones alternating with those with a white "C." At the north end a large electric "C" blazed brightly while the south end was decorated with a large Chicago banner. Booths were at each end of the hall. The musicians' stand in the center of the floor was covered with maroon bunting and was partly concealed by large palms and bay trees.

A little after ten the musicians began the grand march and the long line led by Miss Margaret Sullivan and Mr. Ira Davenport and Miss Frances Meigs and Mr. Raymond Daly moved down the hall.

The Interclass Hop

The second annual Interclass Hop took place on June the ninth, nineteen hundred and eleven, in Bartlett Gymnasium. The evening was unusually warm, but so cool and summery looking were the decorations, and so plentiful was the frappe served at the class booths that no one thought of missing any of the dances. A basketry effect of lavender and white ribbons covered the ceiling; soft colored Japanese lanterns swayed in long festoons, and there was a profusion of tall palms and bay trees.

The hop was led by Esmond Ray Long and May Josephine Carey, Seniors; Clark George Sauer and Clara Wilson Allen, Juniors; Kent Chandler and Margaret Mitchell, Sophomores; and Horace Frank Scruby and Mary Scranton Roe, Freshmen.

THE AREOPLANE

The Walker Conclave

Following the established custom, the inmates of Walker met Friday evening, March 1, 1912, in the annual party given by the students to the faculty of the departments of Geology, Geography, and Paleontology. This party followed closely a dinner given by the faculty for the graduates in their departments, and was only another expression of the good feeling and "camaraderie" which prevails between the students and faculty in those departments.

The Annual Conclave of the Walkerites began at 7:30 p. m., when the hosts and guests all met in Lexington and were introduced to each other. The men were then given slips of paper bearing questions connected with their studies, and told to find for their partner the young lady who had the answer. After the more or less successful mating, the company adjourned to an impromptu theatre for a short program.

The first number was the Geologist Quartet, composed of Payne, MacClintock, Northrup, and Sellers. They were enthusiastically received, special commendation being given to their rendition of "Will we come back?" and "Every Little Fossil." Next came the interpretation of a dictagraph record, which had been taken in Walker during the past month. The next number was a sketch written by Rod Peattie and played by Mr. Manasewitz, Miss Preston, and Miss Williston. Several very pretty Russian dances were introduced into the sketch.

The surprise of the evening came when all of the faculty and their assistants were assembled for an old-fashioned "spell-down" in which Dr. Williston finally took first honors from Prof. Salisbury.

The program closed with a very interesting lecture by Dr. Atwood on the Human Interest in Geology. The talk was well illustrated, and included some views of various members of the department in the field.

Dancing and games followed the program and refreshments were served at 11 o'clock.

The Circus Comes to Lexington

Heralded in gigantic headlines in the columns of the Daily Maroon and in stupendous posters from the pen of artist Rhodes, the world famous W. A. A. Circus arrived in Lexington, February 25 with properties in good order and the animals in good condition. The doors were open to a multitudinous throng of farmers with their wives and families at 7:30 p. m. sharp. Manager Herrick barked in thunderous tones calling attention to the side-shows—the Wild Woman who bit and yelled and nearly drove the eager onlookers into a panic; the Siamese twins of International fame; Eva the gypsy beauty, charmer of venomous reptiles, and Reynolds, the double-jointed woman, “the only living woman who can bend her back entirely double without effort.” After the pop-eyed audience had seated themselves, Policeman Shepard in full regalia cleared the ring and then headed the procession which marched to the stirring music of a military band of rare ability led by drum major Llewellyn.

During the entire performance, the band offered appropriate melodies, and peanuts and popcorn were given gratis to the audience while they watched the remarkable feats with true appreciation. After an elaborate welcome by Monsieur Cornelius Beall, ring-master, he introduced the dainty trapeze artists, Signor Sagar and Signorina Pearl. They performed numerous dare-devil, hair-raising feats which were greeted with vociferous applause by the audience. Following them were four marvelously trained horses, near human, and Moozoo San who astonished the onlookers with her perfect balancing on a board two feet broad. The hearts of the vast crowd were won by the daring bareback rider, Mademoiselle Pierce. Another favorite was Beck cowgirl who handled her revolver with reckless skill and shot with fearless aim. The giraffe was one of the most remarkable ever seen in these parts and could waltz and two-step with agility. In the meantime four clowns funnier than usual, kept the audience in gales of mirth with their ridiculous antics. The grand finale was a thrilling chariot race which nearly ended disastrously when one of the chariots was overthrown. On the way out the side-shows were again viewed. Everyone hopes to see the circus in this neighborhood again.

The University of Chicago Settlement.

The University of Chicago Settlement, situated in a neighborhood just west of the stockyards, is a gathering place for children of all ages and nationalities. The settlement originally started by University students is now largely supported and conducted by both students and members of the faculty.

The work which is done by the Settlement may be divided into two distinct classes. The men and boys are taught English, citizenship, manual training, and are aided in forming and conducting clubs of various kinds. This year the Young Citizens' Dramatic Club successfully "put on" "The Election," a play written by Barrett Clark and produced by W. R. L. Reinhardt. The women are instructed in the proper care of their homes, in sewing and cooking and in improving generally the living conditions.

The present work of the boys' director began a few years ago when the boys measured out a baseball field on the ground now occupied by some of the buildings. The present system in the gymnasium work, is the outcome of the NEW gymnasium and the strenuous and able efforts of the athletic instructor, Mr. Adolph Hrudá. During the past year more than 300 boys varying in age from 4 to 20 years, and representing half a dozen nationalities, have enjoyed the regular activities of the Settlement.

There are many clubs, some under the leadership of university students. Among these the Library Club under the general management of Miss Edna Hudler, with Myra Reynolds, Charlotte Viall and Helen Greenfield assistants and "The American Braves," organized by Ruth Hough, Helene Pollak and Helen Magee.

In the past year, by a circus given under the auspices of the University High School Girls' Club, a generous donation was made which when added to the money from the Settlement dance, has greatly aided Miss McDowell and those working with her in forwarding this splendid work.

“Good-bye, Doc. Ray. Hello, Doc. Reed”

“So Doc Ray’s gone to Princeton,” observed the Regular Stude when he returned last fall. “Wonder who’s going to take his place?”

“A new man,” said the Fountain of Campus Knowledge.

“You don’t say so,” replied the R. S., “But who is he?”

“Doctor Reed, from Rochester,” rejoined the F. C. K. “Fine fellow, they say; but he’s got a big job on his hands to fill Doc. Ray’s shoes. I wonder if he’ll make good.”

That conversation was in October. By November they knew, and others knew, that “Doc” Reed was making good, and by Christmas time there was no question about it. The new man had come to stay. Dr. Reed had “arrived.”

And deservedly so. For few members of the faculty in their daily routine come so closely and personally in touch with men students as the director of the gymnasium, the medical examiner.

“Doc. Ray” during his nineteen years of membership in the University, first as a student and later in the faculty, has always stood for the highest type of Chicago spirit. A mere recital of his activities demonstrates that fact. As an undergraduate he played quarter on that famous pioneer football team of ’92, with the “Old Man” as half back and captain. He won his “C” in football and in track, and in other student activities was likewise prominent, being president of the first real senior class—the old ’96 bunch that had its full four years in the new University—was a charter member of the local chapter of Alpha Delta Phi, a founder of the present Senior Society, and the first head marshal. Graduating with an A. B. in ’96, he completed a medical course at Rush in ’99 and from that time on was a member of the faculties of both institutions. He was a member and is the present chairman of the national Collegiate Basketball Rules Committee and was for many years president of the Western Intercollegiate Basketball Association.

Yet there is no man’s place that cannot be filled, and well filled by another man just as good. “Doc Ray has gone; long live Doc Reed.” Dr. Dudley Billings Reed graduated at Oberlin College with an A. B. in 1901, after having been unusually prominent in student activities during his undergraduate days. He won his Varsity letter in football and baseball, playing quarter and third-base, distinguished himself in tennis, and participated prominently in musical affairs, especially in the Glee and Mandolin clubs of Oberlin. He has composed many songs, most of them good. Among many other accomplishments at Oberlin, he must have specialized in the art of wooing, for in 1908, just as soon as he had taken his M. D. at the medical school of Columbia University, he hastened back to Oberlin to marry Miss Clara Jones, ’04, who had there been his “fair co-ed.” They have one son, Dudley Billings Reed, Jr., now two years old. Dr. Reed was director of physical training and medical supervisor at Asheville School, N. C., for two years ending in 1910, and then went to the University of Rochester as assistant professor and head of the department of physical training. It was here that his work attracted the attention of Mr. Stagg, and he was invited to accept the position left vacant by the resignation of Dr. Raycroft. This he did, his work beginning in October, 1911. Dr. Reed spends his summers at Camp Pemigewassett, in the White Mountains near Pike, N. H. Young in years and younger still in heart, “Doc” Reed wins his way surely and steadily into the affection and respect of that ever-widening circle of those whose pleasure it is to know him as a friend.

Conference Situation

Chicago is now engaged in a somewhat bitter controversy which is raging in the Conference concerning the so-called "amateur principle." The quarrel, which at various times has threatened to disrupt the ruling body of middle western intercollegiate athletics, has centered about the question of whether a man should be allowed to play baseball for money and still remain eligible for competition on a college team.

The trouble arose last autumn, when Earl Pickering, captain of the Minnesota football team, was disqualified on the eve of the Wisconsin game for playing professional baseball. The incident, accompanied by the disagreeable feature of the eleventh hour protest, brought to a head the smouldering discontent throughout the conference, and at the autumn meeting of the ruling body, the abolition of the amateur requirement was heatedly discussed.

At that time the representatives of the various universities decided that the question was too new to them, and postponed it for discussion at a meeting to be held in the following January. At this meeting, a compromise was effected, which provided that a man might play baseball with whosoever he could, provided he took no money.

Chicago at once took a firm stand against this proposition, asserting that it would let down the bars to professionals, and led a movement which caused the defeat of the compromise at a later meeting. The present status of the matter is one of profound dissatisfaction with the present rules on the part of one party, and of a determination to prevent a change at any cost by a second party, to which Chicago belongs.

Chicago's position in the matter has been greatly misinterpreted by many. The University of Chicago has been called hypocritical, in attempting to enforce an impossible condition. This is not true; the University of Chicago believes that amateur sport is possible, even including amateur baseball. Perhaps the teams may not attain to the standard set by those in which professionalism is rampant; but Chicago would rather sacrifice quality, and secure what on the Midway is regarded as the life of intercollegiate sport; the amateur spirit.

The Season

Last year has been a peculiar one in the history of Chicago athletics. It was not marked by a single championship, and from this standpoint, might be called a failure. But to true Chicago men and women, interested more in clean sportsmanship, rather than in victories per se, the season was by no means a failure. For in almost every event, Chicago spirit was tried under the fire of adversity, and proved true.

Last spring was a poor one from the standpoint of victories. The track team was fairly successful, but did not live up to the rosy expectations entertained for success in the conference meet, and so lost the one honor which makes a season a glorious success. The baseball team after securing a flying start, was hammered and hammered by hard luck, and at the end, had finished what is ordinarily called a poor season indeed. But in spite of adversity, the team kept fighting gamely on. When there was no longer hope of success, the team did not "lay down" and this will ever reflect to the credit of the team and of Chicago spirit.

The football season was the bright spot of the year. It started as the gloomiest spot of the year. The material was absolutely hopeless; and in spite of their faith in "the old man," the followers of the game reconciled themselves to one of the gloomiest seasons in the history of Chicago. What happened is known to everyone. It is not the purpose of this article to dwell on the games and the course of the season; it is enough to point out that the same spirit which had carried the track team and the baseball team last spring was again manifested here. It is entirely an incident that the spirit was rewarded with more substantial results in the way of conference honors than was true in the case of the other teams; the fact that is important is that the same spirit was found to exist.

And so on into the indoor season—one of the poorest known to Chicago athletics. Everywhere the same spirit was found; the spirit which refuses to fight for the victory alone, but which is concerned primarily with sport for sport's sake. And the discovery of the fact that this spirit is found to prevail throughout is what marks last season as a decided success.

Football, 1911

The football season of 1911 will probably be best remembered by outsiders as one of excitement, of intenseness, and as one of surprises. But to the members of the team and to Mr. Stagg the season was rather one of intense work and determination.

The defeats of 1909 and 1910 were growing bigger and bigger with each succeeding year and the dominant thought of every member of the team was to supplant these defeats by victories. Now as I look back at the team, I feel as I hope all loyal supporters of the team do—that the team did its best.

Few seasons, I dare say, in the life of the "Old Man" looked more gloomy at the start than the last one; but that only gave him another chance to show his ability to "make" a team. As to his success—the season speaks for itself.

The outgoing members of the team leave with regret active participation in the game. Next fall, however, will see them just as interested in Chicago success and pulling for the team on every down day in and day out, in victory or in defeat. But here's hoping it is victory.

Sincerely,

Charles M Rademacher.

The Men Who Have Played their Last Game

Five men will be missed on Marshall field this fall. Three were seasoned veterans; two were able substitutes. All were men who fought the good fight, who gave to Chicago all they had. Tested in the fires of discouragement, self sacrifice and failure, they rang true. Rademacher, Sauer, Kassulker, Davenport, and Fonger richly deserve the tribute Chicago freely offers in honor of their kind. May we have more men like them—loyal, faithful and true sons of Chicago.

CAPTAIN CHARLES RADEMACHER

The qualities that make up the best football leader may be disputed by different types of players, but to all Chicago men one thing at least will always be certain—"Raddie" embodied the best of them. When the days were darkest it was his spirit of work and fight that inspired the team.

Playing a position that failed to afford, under Chicago's style of play, an opportunity to star like that given to the backfield, nevertheless his play was marked by the steadiness and reliability that won for him his unanimous choice on "All Western." When the line wavered under the shock of assault it was good old Rademacher who gave it the strength that held.

On defense and offense, Rademacher was a master—cool, resourceful, strategic. To him the mere winning of a game was the insignificant thing besides upholding its ideals. He played fair. He gave to his opponents the consideration of a man to a man. In all his fight against odds, his struggle for success, Rademacher was the gentleman. Of such is the true sportsman made.

CLARK SAUER

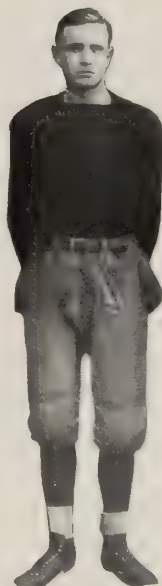

Sauer's last game on Marshall field closed a record that placed him in Chicago's athletic hall of fame. His third year on the gridiron developed him into an All-Western half back. His sensational open field running was the brilliant feature of the season.

In the fall of 1910 the baseball team went to Japan. Sauer played first base. If he had gone with the team, the football season would have seemed hopeless. Sauer stayed. All through the year, while his team mates were writing home of wonderful times, Sauer kept at work in the effort of building up for Chicago a creditable eleven. Nowhere is there a finer example of the kind of spirit that Chicago stands for.

KASSULKER

Kassulker, the last of the "old guard," was kept out of the season until the Minnesota game, by a bad "charlie." But after he once got back, from his position at end he became invaluable. In the disastrous defeat at the hands of the Gophers, Kassulker's tackling was one of the features of Chicago's defense. Zuke was the other baseball man who turned down the trip to the Orient. Chicago men will always appreciate this sacrifice.

DAVENPORT

Davenport is one of the men on the team of whom Chicago is most proud. Called upon when the team needed men badly, Davenport took up the work, in spite of the fact that thereby he was risking severe, if not irreparable injury to his ability on the track. He was put out of the work almost at the outset with a broken collarbone but when the bone mended, he gamely resumed work, and took his part towards the close of the season. "Davy" did not make the showing some of the others did, owing to lack of opportunity, but his grit and willingness to risk himself will ever command the respect of Chicago men and women.

FONGER

Fonger was one of the men who never receive reward in public plaudits for their work, but whose service is nevertheless a decided factor in the success of any team. Fonger sat on the sidelines most of the season, but his gameness in sticking to the team even though he won no reward in public notice is an example of fine Chicago spirit.

Football

The pig-skin "jinks" hung over Marshall field in soggier chunks than even Chicago tradition called for as the season opened. It was some Gloom-Hoodoo. The failure of classes to suspend for the accommodation of Fletcher's auto junket cost Chicago a quarter-back. "Red" Whiteside's pedagogical bug robbed the team of a guard. "Fat" Sawyer fell asleep reading R. T. Crane and business claimed another linesman. Menaull juggled stones on his uncle's corn field and came under the doctor's ban. "Eb" Wilson forgot the admonitions given to him as a Freshman by Dean Vincent and he was out of it. At any rate, when Father Alonzo looked over the bunch on opening day he found a set of hopeless "hopes." Some of them played as if they had been fed on toasted marshmallows all their lives.

Things were perking up a bit, however, when Davenport broke his collar-bone and Kassulker contracted house-maid's knee. That was the last straw. It broke the back tire of Stagg's high geared "Yale racer;" it quelled the violence of Harry English; the subscription list of the Daily Maroon fell off by hundreds.

The problem was one that might have baffled any other coach but "the grand old man." One quarterback, two guards, two ends, a half back and a full back must be found. Some of the new candidates looked good but were raw and inexperienced; others looked so bad both Jimmy and Johnnie—who are used to almost everything—fell off the wagon. Then things changed again.

"Red" Paine was tried out at quarter and took up his new duties with credit to himself and the team. Scruby began to show kicking ability. Whiting, Rademacher, and Carpenter on the line formed a nucleus for the stone wall that was to develop. Norgren, Sauer, and Pierce in the backfield were fast getting their stride. Still, Jimmy Sheldon's team had given Chicago a beating the year before and were talking big of a repetition of such a disaster. What would his team do this year, playing against the weakened Maroons—a team with six men playing their first Varsity game?

The week following Indiana game found Coach Stagg on the field with a new white slouch hat, a patched up back tire, and unusual cordiality to the newspaper reporters. Indiana game had been slaughtered, 23 to 6. Sauer was the hero of the game. Those intercepted forward passes, brilliant open field runs, and clever defensive plays are still fresh in the minds of the lucky ones who were entertained on the side lines. Indiana's score came as the result of a fluke, an inexperienced punter taking too much time in getting the ball away and the blocked kick resulting in a touchdown.

What followed after that game is now history. Chicago fight and the genius of the best coach in the west struggled up together against the tremendous handicaps of weight, experience, and skill. Tested in the fire of the Purdue game, won 11 to 3, Chicago met its old rival, Illinois. The game was played in the mud and rain of a miserable day. Poor Illinois didn't have time to find itself. The game was a procession towards the Orange and Blue goal with a score of 24 to 0 ending the jubilation.

Then came the Minnesota tragedy. Encouraged by a string of victories, the team journeyed to Minneapolis, hopeful and determined. But something went wrong. Whether the team was not keyed up just right, whether the trip and the strange crowd gave the new men stage-fright, cannot be known. At any rate, the score of 30 to 0 is a fair idea of how the two teams played. Chicago was outweighed, close to twenty pounds to the man. Canning, the lightest guard in the Conference, seemed a pigmy against his opponent. Other comparisons were nearly as bad. The result was a crushing blow to the hopes raised by the Illinois victory.

Northwestern found a team of listless Maroons and the crowd which went to Evanston had the scare of its life. Nine to three was the way the score read, but three to three would have been a better comparison of the strength of the two teams in earned scores. A week of gruelling practice followed. Stagg lashed the men mercilessly. Every man who had an idea that he was a football player, destined for Camp's All-American, had all such ideas tied and canned. Then came those two last games; Cornell and Wisconsin.

The line had not been thoroughly tested in the previous contests. Up to the Minnesota game, the victories had been too easily won. Cornell came from the east with a strong team, with a notable list of victories behind it, and the Big Red squad had been defeated only by close scores by the strongest teams. The great question was, "Would the line hold?"

Who doesn't remember that stand Chicago made on the one yard line? Cornell had but four feet to go to gain the touchdown; in three downs they had won but two feet. Chicago won the game 6 to 0, Scruby booting over two field goals. Cornell had defeated Michigan and the victory was therefore all the more agreeable to Chicago students. But what struck everyone with more than ordinary significance was that Chicago fight had rung true—the "paper line" held.

Wisconsin came to Chicago claiming equal title honors with Minnesota. The Badgers had held the Gophers to a tie game and hoped for a larger score than Minnesota had made over the Maroons. Again came a battle of skill and nerve-racking football science. Again came that magnificent stand of the line. Again Chicago fight and Stagg's genius conquered—a notable ending of a notable season. Starting with the poorest prospects imaginable, the team ended with a record that brought to Chicago the plaudits of the West and the East. Captain Rade-macher, Sauer and Scruby were honored by being given positions on the "all-Western"—a selection that was unanimous. Scruby won recognition from Walter Camp, being placed at guard on the second all-American.

Minnesota was given the Conference championship because of an unbeaten record. Chicago, on a technicality, might have made claims to at least an equal share but Chicago wants no honor where the claim would mean petty bickering and quarreling over comparative scores. Chicago was placed in second place and the team was well content. The men who fought shoulder to shoulder up through a hard season lost the championship but won more—the recognition of Chicago's sportsmanship.

And so ended the season of 1911—a most glorious season for Chicago. Praise for the old man, praise for the team, came from every quarter. The players who acquitted themselves so nobly made up one of the best fighting teams Chicago ever honored. Hats off to the team—and hats off to the "old man."

In general, I would say we had a successful season. We won the Indoor Conference in good style and made a strong bid for the outdoor title, but were a little bit unfortunate in having the points break the way they did for Missouri. However, they had a good team and deserved the victory. We won a majority of our dual meets. I wish to thank the fellows for the way they worked and the students for their hearty support throughout the season.

Sincerely,

Track

The season of 1911 was satisfying to a certain extent, although not a marked success. As in former years, Mr. Stagg was forced to depend on a limited number of men, and a great deal of our success was due to individual ability rather than to team work. The relay team, composed of Menaul, Straube, Skinner, and Davenport, was, however, the best in the history of Chicago, and the equal of any college team ever turned out in this country.

The season opened on April twenty-first with the Drake Games at Des Moines. Here the relay team first showed their worth by easily defeating Missouri University, the Missouri Valley champions.

One week later the team achieved a most gratifying success at Philadelphia, where they won the one Mile National Championship Relay Race. The time of the race was 3 minutes, 21 4-5 seconds, just 3-5 of a second slower than the record made by Harvard in 1900. It was a sensational race, and victory was not assured until "Tad" Skinner forged ahead in the third quarter and gave "Davvy" a three yard lead over Craig of Michigan. Although Craig did his best, and he was credited with 48 3-5 seconds, he could not overcome the slight lead of Davenport, who for the second time in three years carried the "Maroon" to well merited victory.

After the Pennsylvania games the men settled down to hard training with Illinois Day in view. The hoodoo, which followed the baseball team thru the season, must have effected the track team, for expected victory was turned into defeat by the overwhelming strength of Illinois in the field events and distance runs.

The following week we were defeated by Purdue. A constant downpour of rain during the afternoon spoiled all chances for good performances, although it did not dampen the spirits of the men, who were determined to carry off first honors at the Conference Meet two weeks later.

The Conference Meet at Minneapolis on June third, was, however, a bitter disappointment to the Maroon rooters. It seemed almost certain that Chicago would win first honors, and it was not till the last few events of a hard fought meet that the well-balanced Missouri team snatched the victory from our grasp. The Chicago men did all that was expected of them, and it was Missouri's strength and not our weakness which caused defeat.

Although Coyle, Menaul, Straube, and Earle performed creditably, it was Davenport who furnished the thrills. He repeated his feat of the preceding year, by winning the quarter and half mile events in record time. His victory in the quarter was comparatively easy, but in the half mile he mistimed his sprint, and it was only by a nerve-racking finish that he managed to break the tape six inches ahead of Bermond, the Missouri star.

After the meet Davenport was elected captain for the coming season. Everything points to a most successful year. With Menaul, Coyle, Skinner, Kuh, and Whiting of the 1911 team in college, and several promising athletes from last year's freshmen team on hand, the prospects look good for the best team in years.

Ira Nelson Davenport

Ira Nelson Davenport, captain of the track team, closes his University athletic career with this spring, at the same time writing the last of a record of achievements almost unparalleled in the history of Chicago athletics. Davenport has done about all that it is possible for a man to do in his chosen events, the middle distance runs, and for three years, has with a few others, been the scoring mainstay of the University track team.

Davenport was not unknown when he came to the University. The spring before matriculating, he had come to the interscholastic as the representative of the Oklahoma University Preparatory school, he had won third place for his school by his own victories. His work during the freshman year branded him as one of the most promising men who had entered the University in years.

Next spring he leaped into fame by breaking the conference records for the middle distance runs at the meet held at the University of Illinois, as a climax to a season of unbroken victories in these events in dual meets.

The following year was practically a repetition of the former. Although he set no new records in the conference, he was unbeaten by a western college athlete, and in addition, was a member of the relay team which won the championship of the United States at the University of Pennsylvania games.

This year was not as spectacular as the other two in Davenport's career—not because his work was falling off, but because he had already “conquered the athletic world.” The year also brought two defeats—one in an invitation meet held in New York, in which he met the stars of the east, and another defeat in the quarter at the indoor conference meet at Evanston. Both defeats were the result of an attempt to run too close a race, and in both cases he followed his defeats by startling victories.

And yet, with this wonderful record behind him, with the prospect of representing America in the Olympic games at Stockholm ahead of him, Davenport has maintained his modest simplicity of manner, and hearty good fellowship. Known to the collegiate world of America as one of its foremost stars, he is known to his fellow students as a whole-hearted and sincere friend. When Davenport leaves the University this spring, Chicago will lose one of its best athletes and finest men.

University of Pennsylvania Relay Races

PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, APRIL 29, 1911

One Mile Championship Relay Race was won by Chicago, with Menaul, Straube, Skinner, and Davenport for its team; Michigan, second; Cornell, third; Pennsylvania, fourth; Syracuse, fifth. Time, 3 minutes, 21 4-5 seconds. This time is within 2-5 second of the record established by Harvard in 1902.

Chicago has competed eleven times in the One Mile Championship Relay Races and has won first place five times, second place twice, third place three times, and fourth place once. In 1905 Chicago lost the race through a technicality.

SECOND ANNUAL INDOOR MEET, OMAHA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

OMAHA, NEBRASKA, APRIL 1, 1911

Chicago, with Kuh, Menaul, Timblin, and Davenport for its team, won the relay race of 1560 yards, in 3 minutes, 16 1-5 seconds; Michigan was second; Nebraska, third. Menaul won third place in the shot put, distance 43 ft., 6 3/4 in.

DRAKE UNIVERSITY RELAY RACES—DES MOINES, IOWA, APRIL 22, 1911

Chicago, with Menaul, Straube, Skinner, and Davenport for its team, won the one mile relay race, in 3 minutes, 24 3-5 seconds; Missouri, second; Drake, third.

PENNSYLVANIA RELAY TRIALS—APRIL 22, 1911

The following men were selected to represent University of Chicago at games:

One Mile Relay: I. N. Davenport, J. A. Menaul, A. H. Straube, G. S. Skinner.

Pole Vault: F. J. Coyle. 120 Yard Hurdles and Broad Jump: G. E. Kuh.

120 Yard Hurdles: L. H. Whiting.

The High School Relay Trials were won by Evanston Academy, (E. B. Blair, L. Tower, E. Williams, and W. Kelley) time, 3 minutes, 41 3-5 seconds.

The 1911 Conference

Chicago's track team, headed by Coach Stagg and Captain "Bunny" Rogers, left for Minneapolis late last spring, with high hopes of bringing home the championship. Notre Dame, Illinois, and Missouri were picked as the most dangerous rivals, but with a reasonable number of victories by outside colleges, Chicago's chances were by far the best. Davenport, Rogers, Coyle, Straube, and Earle formed a scoring nucleus that was expected to take about twenty-two points, and the other steady workers of the team were counted on to bring in several more. The total should have been enough, provided no other team made an unexpected score, to win by a fairly comfortable margin.

Everything started well for Chicago. Thirds and fourths by Straube and Earle in the dashes, and firsts by Davenport in the two middle distance runs, gave the team a flying start, with Coe and Missouri lagging far behind. A first by Menaul in the shotput, won on the field while the track athletes were doing their part, helped out in the rosy outlook.

Then the luck changed. Baker, of Oberlin, the strongest miler in the meet, did not run, the other stars fell off in their form and Johnson and Steele of Missouri cleaned up the long distance runs, and Nicholson and Kirskey, their team-mates, won the two hurdle races, and Missouri was running an even race with Chicago.

From that point, Missouri had things going right all the way. Chicago's fourth in the relay and Coyle's triple tie with two Illinois entrants in the pole vault, were offset by the Missourian Roberts' first in the discus, and when the meet was over, Chicago had finished behind the southwesterners. A well fought contest, and a satisfactory place was brought back to the Varsity in place of the expected championship.

The standing of the different entrants was as follows:

Baseball

We started the season in fine shape last spring, with the team that made the trip to Japan practically intact. After the North-western and Wisconsin games, both of which were won by big scores, we had visions of a championship. Then bad luck hit us. Steinbrecher was declared ineligible, and Sauer and Orno Roberts were put out of it by injuries. From then on it was a matter of finishing the season as well as we could, and the fellows did well. I hope for better luck and better returns this year.

Sincerely yours.

Frank Collinge

Baseball

The baseball season last year was one of high expectations and bitter disappointment. Starting with the team that made the Japan trip practically intact, and making a splendid record in the first few games, the team was broken up by one misfortune after another, and finished the season fighting simply to make as creditable a showing as possible.

The season certainly opened well. After a successful series of preliminary games, the Varsity started in on Northwestern. Following that game won in handy fashion, the team went to Madison for the first real struggle. When it was over, the Cardinals were nowhere to be found—they were busy explaining the frightful score rolled up against them. Iowa and Indiana were easy victims, and then came the old foe, Illinois.

At this point, the hard luck which was to break up the team commenced its nefarious operations. Steinbrecher was declared ineligible—losing to the team one of the best catchers in the conference. Chicago had no one to replace him, and in this shape, journeyed to Champaign for the game against the Illini. There the hard luck continued—Sauer and Orno Roberts were laid out with injuries which kept them out of the game during the better part of the playing season. In spite of this, the game went an extra inning, finally being taken by Illinois, 4 to 3. Although hope was still alive, Illinois definitely ended Chicago's aspirations by winning a second game, 7 to 1. Northwestern had previously succumbed, as had Lake Forest in an exhibition game, but Illinois continued its pernicious activities by winning a third game, 11 to 4. Minnesota added to the gloom by taking a 2 to 1 game, and Illinois finally and forever quenched hope by winning a fourth, 5 to 1.

From that point, it was a question of finishing the season as gracefully as possible. Purdue went under, 4 to 2, but Indiana sprung a surprise by taking a game, and the Boilermakers obtained revenge for their defeat by winning a 12 to 9 game, ending the season of conference games.

From the standpoint of games, the season was certainly a failure. But Chicago will always gladly remember that the team did not give up—that in the face of insurmountable obstacles, it fought on to the finish. The fight of the baseball team last year was part and parcel of the fine spirit of Chicago—the game for the game's sake, and not for the victory.

Basketball

I should say that we had a successful season, considering what we had against us. Practically a new team had to be developed, while the other teams were practically intact from last year. The men did their work well, in spite of the fact that they had no championship in view after the beginning of the season, and exhibited true sportsmanlike spirit. We will have the same team next year, with the exception of Goldstein, and I hope to see the fellows bring home a championship.

Basketball

The 1912 basketball season was one of reverses and of high hopes dashed—of a flying start with the expectancy of a championship, a slump, and a third place in the final standing. And yet the season was not a disappointment. As an achievement, the season's record is little—as a promise, it holds much. For although the same team as that of last year failed to win the first honors this year, it will be practically intact for 1913, and the few vacant places will be filled from a freshman team the most promising in years.

The first piece of bad fortune which assailed the team came before the squad had played a game. Captain Clark G. Sauer, whose record the year before had marked him as one of the best players in the conference, was forced to withdraw because of his physical condition. In spite of this loss, the team went ahead and after disposing of the Northwestern five, defeated Illinois 22 to 21 at Urbana January 20, in a whirlwind contest which marked the Chicago squad as one of the strong contenders for the conference title.

With the preliminary contests won, Chicago met Wisconsin in the first of the games which were to decide the championship. Although the men played a spirited game, and kept the score even until the last few minutes, Wisconsin managed to win and forged to the front in the race. The defeat by Purdue the following week, in spite of the victory over Indiana the following night, reduced Chicago's chances to a minimum which disappeared when the team, after defeating Northwestern, lost a second hard-fought game to Purdue.

From then on it was a question of finishing the season as well as possible. Another defeat by Wisconsin and one by Minnesota, followed by a victory in the final game of the season with the Gophers, placed Chicago in a respectable third place, following Wisconsin and Purdue.

Considered as a year of actual performances, 1912 will not be a bright one in the Chicago calendar. But if the season be viewed from the amateur standpoint—as a series of games for the sake of the games, rather than as struggles for victory 1912 is by no means poor. The games were well fought; the team never gave up, and when the contest was over, no bitter feelings were left. What better could be asked in the interests of true sportsmanship?

Considering the men played for Chicago, much might be said. Captain Sauer and Goldstein are the men who leave the team. Sauer did not play. Goldstein will leave a record of faithful service, of clever playing—altogether a creditable forward, one worthy of his “C.” Three Juniors, Bell, Paine, and Goettler, are also men who played clever, consistent games, and who will be valuable next year. But Norgren, the Sophomore forward, is the one who deserves most mention. Playing his first year in conference basketball, “Norgy,” in his clean-cut, modest, and yet wonderfully effective game, gave opposing guards all they could do to stop him, and by his indomitable spirit kept Chicago hope alive at all times. With two years left, it is hardly too much to say that Norgren will be one of the best basketball men who have played the game for Chicago.

Swimming

The swimming season this winter could not be called remarkable, from the standpoint of victories. Coach White struggled against handicaps of every sort, including wholesale ineligibility and injuries to the best men at critical times. In spite of this the men kept at work, and finished the season fighting all the way through the winter. They were not quitters in any sense of the term, and this should count a lot to their credit, considering the actual showing made in scores. And I hope they will have better success next year, although I know they cannot make a gamer nor a better fight.

Soccer

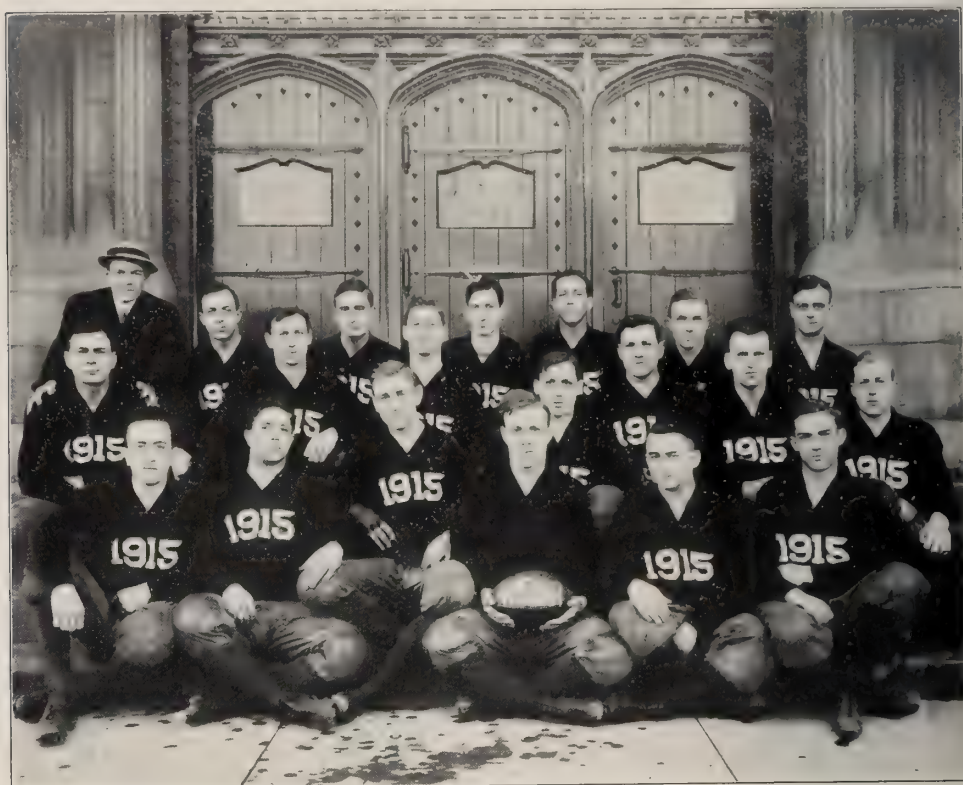

The second year of Soccer at the University of Chicago was in many respects much more successful than the first. No conference games were played, as the only other conference team at Illinois was disbanded early in the fall. A number of local games were played however, and the season ended without a single defeat. The team this year was greatly strengthened by the addition of Chang Tan, Yale's 1910 star full-back. On the offense the addition of Catron, who scored most of this season's points was of great help. The biggest game of the year was played on November 11, against the Campbell Rover Juniors.

The freshman swimming team for last year was conspicuous because it was practically non-existent. The faculty has swung the axe with telling effect, and when the bombardment of notices from the Dean had ceased, Coach White was left gasping amid the remnants of the team that might have been, but wasn't.

The epidemic of "ineligibility" was unfortunate from an athletic point of view, for the team was capable of making a more than creditable performance. Headed by Captain Philip T. Mallen, who during the course of the year tied the world's record in the 60 yard swim, aided by Frank F. Selfridge, and Robert C. White, both capable swimmers, the team could have bested practically any squad in the Conference colleges. The fine chance the team obtained to break into competition was seized in royal style, the team proving an easy victor in the inter-class series.

The only real cheer to be extracted from the situation was that these men would be able to bolster up the sadly riddled squad of this winter. If the men prove able to win "grade-points" as easily as they break records, and are able to compete next year, the freshman swimming team of 1912 will be remembered as a creditable organization, although it did not get a chance to represent the Varsity in an actual contest.

Freshman Minor Sports

In accordance with the University policy of broadening out interest in athletics sufficiently to embrace a greater number than can find a place on the major sports teams, teams have been formed to compete in almost every variety of minor sports. These teams are embraced in two groups, Varsity and Freshman, with separate schedules for contests for each.

The freshman minor sports teams are as yet undeveloped, with the tennis and golf teams practically the only ones which are sufficiently organized to accomplish much. Interest in both of the teams mentioned has been great during the spring, inasmuch as competition on the squads enables men to escape the confinement of the gymnasium, and the drudgery of work on Marshall field, and engage in healthful, exciting competition in the open air, with the added bait of gymnasium credit.

The freshman teams compete on the campus, while the golf squad uses the Jackson Park links. The athletic department is planning to arrange a schedule of games with outside teams for each squad for this spring. If these arrangements work out, interest in both teams will be greatly heightened thereby, and raise them to a position on a par with other freshman sports.

Teams in gymnastics, wrestling and fencing, are among the possibilities which the athletic department hopes to realize in the near future. With these teams organized, and acting as "feeders" to the Varsity teams, the students of the University will really reap the benefit of the comprehensive plan of interesting work offered them by the department of physical culture and athletics.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC COACHES

Women's Athletics

The Women's Athletic Department of the University of Chicago has an exceedingly important place in the undergraduate life of the institution. Aside from caring for the physical development of the women it provides for them a social union which would otherwise be lacking. What the Reynolds Club activities are to the men, the W. A. A. is to the women. In spite of the lamentable lack of an adequate club house or meeting place for the women there is centered about Lexington gymnasium and hall a life quite unnoticed by outsiders but without which the existence of the undergraduate woman would be barren indeed.

Under the able guidance of Miss Gertrude Dudley, the past year in Lexington gymnasium has been a most beneficial and enjoyable one. The various annual events were carried off with eclat including a highly exciting tennis tournament last spring in which Josephine Kern and Cornelia Beall battled for the final honors and Miss Beall wrested the title from the champions of the previous year.

There are, to be sure, crying needs, and the most evident one is the lack of an adequate gymnasium. The antiquated structure now used by the women has long been outgrown and outworn and it is greatly to the credit of the W. A. A. that several projects have been started to raise money for the building of a new and up-to-date gymnasium. It is clear, however, that whatever effort is put forth by that body must necessarily be insufficient of itself and that unless the women are aided by the University they will continue to occupy their present unsatisfactory quarters.

Perhaps it is not the duty of THE CAP AND GOWN to seek to effect campus reforms, but surely it is not out of place to voice here the just complaint of those who are obliged to use Lexington gymnasium. The Women's Athletic Department is doing a praiseworthy work and it ought to be given the proper facilities for doing that work. As long as Lexington gymnasium remains unimproved the members of the Women's Athletic faculty may at least be said to be laboring under discouraging difficulties.

The W. A. A.

With each year the W. A. A. proves more and more its value as a University organization. The past year has shown that enthusiasm among the members does not dwindle as graduation approaches, for the seniors have carried off the basketball, baseball, and hockey trophies. The juniors have been game losers, however, and have shown themselves capable of continuing the work of the association in the future.

The Spring Festival was a thing of beauty, and if judged by the number of spectators, might be called the most successful event of the year. The freshman reception, the "Chicago Night for Chicago Women," which 250 members attended, and the luncheon given to the Wisconsin women who came down to the Wisconsin-Chicago game, gained many enthusiastic adherents.

The hockey championship games for 1912 were played during the fall quarter, resulting in a victory for the juniors. The other championship games and the Winter Circus, with the annual banquet as a climax came off with the usual eclat.

Dormitory Life

A fond mother was once heard to remark, with a sigh, "I sent Paul in his senior year to Hitchcock for a touch of dormitory life, but he got none!" How many fond mothers before and since have likewise sighed, History does not record, but be their number large or small, one thing is certain, it is doomed to remain fixed—in the future no mother need sigh over this matter. Times have changed for, in Hitchcock, Dormitory Life has at last begun to stir.

To the good end a notable contribution was made by the opening house meeting and the dance that resulted from the action there taken. Noteworthy in attendance and from the fact that on the motion of the students themselves a dance was arranged for that later on was carried through with marked success, this meeting will go down in Hitchcock's annals as an event of epoch-marking importance. It should be admitted, to give the Devil his due, that much of the spontaneity that characterized both the meeting and the dance was due to an infusion of new blood from Snell, that preparatory department for the higher life of Hitchcock to whose migrations and hardy denizens, if she owes much, yet Hitchcock in return gives copiously of her civilizing favors.

Conspicuous among these must be counted that annual event at the season of good cheer, the Christmas breakfast given by Mrs. Hitchcock and happily also blessed by her presence. To those far from home at the Christmas season this touch of home interest means much.

To her, as to all of us, another event gave unusual pleasure and is a cause for congratulation—this was the acceptance of Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett of the counselorship made vacant by the resignation of Mr. and Mrs. Meachem.

Perhaps the conclusion of this yearly account for Hitchcock Hall may best be made by reference to two events, one an accomplished fact, the other a dream of the future. In the first place, then, be it recorded with all due gratitude and amazement that the hall is free from debt—the piano is paid for and now stands upon its own legs. The other matter is the prospective acquisition of a telephone to be installed in the library. The likelihood of its consummation is as yet no bigger than a cloud upon the horizon, the size of a man's hand—nor does it give promise of increasing in size until some second Elijah shall arise to prevail mightily with the Lord.

In the past academic year Snell has again been Snell—the reformed Snell as some would have it. Though dances were fewer in number, there was no abatement of the traditional sociability and solidarity of life at Snell.

At all smokers and eats a program of stunts preceded the feasting. Nowhere on the campus could such a variety of acts have been pulled off. It was all strictly home talent. Our invalid piano, vintage of 1830 or thereabouts, presented in the early days by some kind soul from out of the family heirlooms, did valiant service under the able coaxing of Hungry Hoefer, seconded by the sweet tunes of our only Queen. There were the classic strains of the Rev. Matthews, Wykie, and Ledford—also the “strains” of George, the “Prints of Wails,” Hall Photographer and erstwhile official canary. Minstrels, clog dancing, the whirls of the veils, changed off with boxing, fencing and wrestling. We point with pride to our Secretary Myron Ullmann who slew the giant “Russian” Sasuly. Charles Juvenile Aristophanes Stewart was ever ready with the stories and the acid, while Dr. Zee gave useful and entertaining accounts of boyhood in China.

And yet, there is a change in Snell. Possibly it is only a passing symptom, perhaps it augurs the future. Snell is fast becoming the abode not so much of undergraduates as of professional and graduate students. The undergrad of tradition and with him a part of the old life seems to be disappearing. Certain elements considered vital to the spirit of Snell thus far seem to have fled before the forbidding phalanx of Maxmillian Theories of Electricity, Neurology, Geology, Public Service Corporations, Highest Mathematics, and Gothic. It seems too bad that it should be so but the transition is only natural.

There was little disturbance of the new calm of Snell. True the architect with creditable foresight constructed walls and corridors in Snell so as to conduct in the best possible manner all sounds, be they ever so tiny. But that is an affliction and beyond the control of the Snellites. Occasionally, as if to aid the natural sounding boards, dwellers of the Fourth and the other tiers would blossom forth. Carlie the Irrepressible and his satellites, Daniel Webster Chapman of the soundless voice, the Earl of Huntington and some lesser lights, periodic reverence to the great god Turbulence, but in the main all was serene and uneventful.

The Graduate Halls

North Hall

The row of barracks stretching south from Cobb is, like all Gaul, divided into three parts; and at the north end thereof, an island of erudition in the midst of a sea of campus frivolity, is North Hall. Mark the name, North, not North Divinity; divinity is not one of its attributes. A goodly share of those herein incarcerated are of those strange genuses Faculty Man and Graduate Student. Here they toil throughout the night, pawing over dictionaries and ponderous tomes in search of weird facts of history and science, lurid theories of economics, wherewith to paralyze the hapless undergraduate and startle the learned world. It has to be done, you see, to make the University famous.

Middle Divinity Hall

“ - - - - - Sights of woe,
Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace
And rest can never dwell, hope never comes
That comes to all; but torture without end
Still urges, and a fiery deluge, fed
With ever-burning sulphur unconsumed.
Such place eternal justice had prepared
For those rebellious; here their prison ordained
In utter darkness, and their portion set
As far removed from God and light of Heaven
As from the center thrice to the utmost pole.”

Milton intended the above lines as a description of Hell, but as an account of Middle Divinity Hall let them go double. We have assurances from those hardy few who have resided there and returned to tell the tale that conditions in the two regions are very similar, except that Middle D. is perhaps not so well heated.

South Divinity Hall

The Sanctum Sanctorum, holy of holies, region of repose, abode of the “saints who from their labors rest” a good share of the time—of course, dear Reader, we mean South Divinity Hall—lies contiguous to its naughty neighbors, North Hall and Middle D. Shake off the dust from thy feet as thou crossest the holy threshold, and behold the strange beings that here find their abiding-place. You will not be able to read the directory of the hall, for it is written in cuneiform characters from the good old days of Assuh-bani-pal. You will hear the chanting of Psalms in purest Hebrew. The dulcet tones of the brother practising next Sunday’s sermon for the Bird Center Baptist church will greet your ears. No sounds of unseemly hilarity break the holy calm, no fumes of nicotine pollute the sacred atmosphere.

The Lament of the Foster Girl

It is a girl of Foster
And she stoppeth one of three,
"By thy sad pained cheek and searching eye
Now wherefore stopp'st thou me?"

"You have not served for all this term,"
Quoth the Foster girl severe;
"Now serve today, this afternoon,
Do, please do, my dear.

I've paced along down through this hall
Tired as I could be,
They close their doors where'er I go
For fear I'll ask, 'Serve tea?' "

Fifty girls had I sought in vain
I had heard no good reply
Until I met that freshman Lass
On whom I could rely.

I showed her where the cakes were kept,
I pointed out the tea,
I helped her make her first attempt
And good I hoped 'twould be.

Oh sweeter far than anything else
'Tis sweeter far to me
To hear the girl say readily,
'Today—let me serve tea,'

O tea! it is a restful thing
Beloved by nearly all;
From busy grind to the butterfly
They like their tea as you and I
Each one in Foster Hall.

Farewell, farewell, but this I tell
It is not fun, oh friend,
To manage tea for seventy girls
And to my books attend."

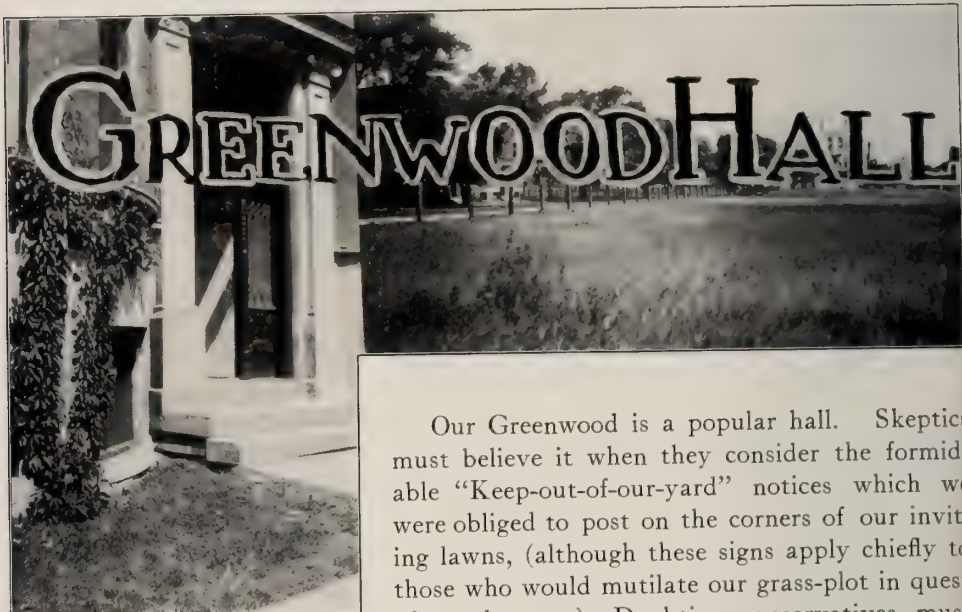

R. B. B.

GREEN HALL

Kelly Hall

Sing, O Muse, in limpid measure, of dear Kelly and her glory, where there's not a lone condition nor a grind, so goes the story; where the breakfast caps are legion, and the fancy sprigs are vernal, and the damsels seek with laughter for the slippery culture kernel. Sing, O Muse, in rippling numbers, of the grand off-campus party, where the stunts were strange and gorgeous, and the guests laughed long and hearty; of the supper on the lake shore, where in Luna's rays so tender Kelly sang in dulcet numbers of a princess fair and slender. Tell me of the ghosts and mummies, who on Hallowe'en so eerie, with a host of walking pumpkins, filled the hall with laughter cheery. And, O Muse, if thou art able, in a burst of golden thunder, chortle forth the new girls' praises of the big Grand Opera wonder. Sing, O Muse, in dreadful whisper, of those strange defying factors, of initiation holy—deaf and dumb were all the actors! Turn in bird-notes, light and airy, to the dance of joy and pleasure, when each living Kelly maiden danced with grace and ease the measure. Sing in murmur, soft and calm-like, of the tea where damsels cheerful talked of Bouts and Santayana in vocabularies fearful. Sing, O Muse, this tender story, with the graceful touch of Shelley, of the prowess and the glory of the happy hall of Kelly!

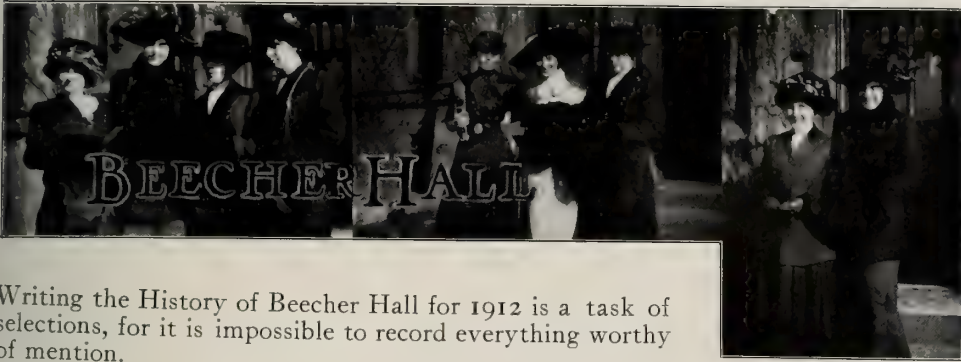

Our Greenwood is a popular hall. Skeptics must believe it when they consider the formidable "Keep-out-of-our-yard" notices which we were obliged to post on the corners of our inviting lawns, (although these signs apply chiefly to those who would mutilate our grass-plot in quest of mushrooms.) Doubting conservatives must credit the well-founded campus rumors about the great number of applications for rooms in Greenwood. And melodious testimony to our precedence is often borne by midnight serenaders with a mysterious tenor in their midst.

Our Greenwood is also an active hall. Last spring quarter, besides the usual beach party and class table merry-making, the Greenwood Glee Club gave a concert of exceptional merit. This fall the spirit of Hallowe'en cast a most uncanny spell over the members of our hall, particularly over our apparel. But we soon recovered our dignity and on November twentieth gave a reception to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Heckman and Miss Heckman. The date was especially happy since it was Greenwood's birthday and also the anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Heckman. Our last activities have been the work of disciplining the new girls for initiation into house membership; and during this training the novices exhibited incredible histrionic talent, even succeeding in making some marked improvements on Shakespeare.

But above everything, our Greenwood is a campus hall. The line in our song "We're south of the Midway" is no longer true. Even though a cry may come from victims of fourth floor "eight-thirties" who sometimes long for a pneumatic-tube rapid transit system, Greenwood is on the campus, and of the campus, and loyally Maroon.

Writing the History of Beecher Hall for 1912 is a task of selections, for it is impossible to record everything worthy of mention.

The past year has been an interesting one in the annals of Beecher Hall. Fall quarter found every room occupied and every girl congenial. The Beecher girls have had many good times during the year to record in their diaries. First a beach-party which the house members gave the new girls. None of the "common" meals ever tasted as good as that sizzling bacon cooked on sticks over the fire, and the coffee, black and strong from tin cups. The new girls reciprocated with a Hallowe'en party, at which all lost their dignity, and forgot their impending lessons as they bobbed merrily for apples and did other appropriate stunts equally ridiculous.

Two among the many other gala days stand out most prominently—the faculty dinner and our play "Everystudent." Notice that it is "our" play in every sense of the word. A "Beecherite" was the author and a Beecher cast presented it, under Beecher management and direction. It was an unusually clever farce written in blank verse and enlivened by catchy choruses. Everyone of us declares the year 1911-12 at Beecher a "howling" success.

HISTORY

It is sometimes asked: "Why is there not more class spirit in the Law School?" The answer is evident. The law men as a group have tangible ties of common interest to bind them together, while the separate classes have only the artificial bonds of sentiment. The law men as a group are puzzling themselves over such hair-splitting and hair-raising questions as: "If a resident of Illinois and a resident of Indiana form a contract in Kentucky for a piece of work to be performed in Ohio, what state laws govern the procedure?" or "Are Reno divorces valid in New York?" The law men as a group again hold the big annual smoker and stunt-fest in the fall, when the devotees of the woosack come out of their shells and wake the echoes of our Gothic halls in a grand outburst of unwonted hilarity. On the other hand, the individual classes have nothing in common except that their members are all hoping to take their degrees at the same time, and consequently the average law class is merely an arbitrary organization without much purpose or life.

But we beg to inform you, dear reader—the law class of 1912 is no average class. It early showed that it was inordinately enthusiastic about itself, for in the freshman year, after the examination in Torts, the men assembled and held a rousing banquet by way of exultation. It showed again its lively interest in politics, for the campaign carried through by the several candidates for senior presidency was hot and exciting. Who can ever forget it? Who can ever forget the severe denunciation of "Pat" Green printed and distributed by his own campaign managers according to popular belief? 1912 showed always, too, that it was on hand when any law school activity needed support. Witness the predominance of seniors in the now historic coal wagon float in our Fourth Annual Spring Athletic Festival!

The end is drawing near, and before we know it we shall have quitted forever our customary haunts in our cold white halls. The law senior does not feel like the man who is taking his bachelor's degree. He is more resigned, his future is more settled perhaps, and, altogether, the second ceremony of graduation is less trying than the first. Nevertheless there are regrets—you all know what they are—we say no more.

Junior Law Class

"Inauspicious class," is what the casual observer would remark upon observing our numerals. Nevertheless the Class of '13 has given the lie to all the false pretenses of traditional superstition. The very fact that the members had the courage to enter a class so designated is one of the best indicia of their qualities of courage and sanity so necessary to the successful lawyer. But if more specific proof be demanded the facts and figures are not absent. A perusal of the record sheets in the dean's office would reveal a startling inconsistency with the meagre showing of former classes. And, better still, our achievements are not restricted to grades which are chiefly recommendations to faculty members. We have prodigious workers among us—men who live to study and who would rather read Bracton or Blackstone than the Saturday Evening Post. In athletics our standing is fully shown by the fact that one of our number is University wrestling coach and — heavy weight champion.

Socially—the Lar and Penates of the Law School rise up to forbid an account of our distinction along this line. Social diversions are diametrically opposed to the pervading spirit of the school, and all indulgences along this line should be studiously concealed.

MEDICINE

To John Milton Dodson
Dean of the Medical School
This Department is Respectfully Dedicated

Rush Medical College

For several years the University of Chicago has been carrying on the first two years' work of Rush Medical College. The affiliation providing for this relationship was established in 1898. Previous to that time the work had been done at Rush Medical College proper, which is situated on Harrison Street, between Hermitage avenue and Wood street.

The institution has had a long career. It was chartered by the Illinois Legislature in 1837, but did not begin holding lectures until 1843. The college was founded by the late Daniel Brainerd, who was also its first president. The growth of the institution was rapid and healthy. By 1867 it owned a large, new building at Dearborn avenue and Indiana street. This, however, was destroyed in the great fire of 1871. The following three years the school occupied temporary quarters on the grounds of the Cook County Hospital, but in 1875 the present clinical building was erected. Since then the Laboratory, across the street from the first structure, and the Senn Building, just east of it, have been added.

In connection with the Medical College is the Presbyterian Hospital, established in 1883; an affiliation has also been established recently with the Children's Memorial Hospital. Rush Medical College is one of the several institutions officially recognized by the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of London, England. On the faculty are the following well known specialists, who are a large factor in making the reputation of the college what it is: Frank Billings, Ludvig Hektoen, Edwin Oakes Jordan, James Nevins Hyde, Ephraim Fletcher Ingals, Walter Stanley Haines, John Milton Dodson, Arthur Dean Bevan, John Clarence Webster, Thor Rothstein, George Elmer Shambaugh, and Edward L. V. Brown.

By the terms of affiliation with the University of Chicago, the Board of Trustees is composed of members not belonging to the teaching force of the college. This board assumes the financial management and appoints the faculty, but delegates to the latter the control of the educational work subject to the rules of the University and the approval of the Board of Trustees. The affiliation thus assures the maintainance of a higher order of instruction and a steady advance in modern educational methods.

"School of Education"

The School of Education

The School of Education of the University of Chicago was formed by the consolidation with the University of Chicago Institute founded by Mrs. Emmons Blaine and presided over by the late Colonel Francis W. Parker; the laboratory School of the Department of Education in the University, the founder and director of which was Professor John Dewey, formerly head of the Department of Education; The South Side Academy, the Dean of which was Dr. Wm. B. Owen, several years head of the University High School; and the Chicago Manual Training School, whose head for many years was Dr. Henry H. Belfield. There is, therefore, gathered into one group of buildings a complete school system, kindergarten, elementary school, High School, college and graduate departments, with opportunities for training teachers under the most favorable educational surroundings.

The fundamental purpose of the School of Education is to organize education on a scientific basis and to equip students with a knowledge of the principles of educational psychology, school organization and methods, and to give them a survey of the historical development of educational institutions.

Committee on Student Affairs

The Student Council of the School of Education consisted of seven members representing departments or groups of interest in the College of Education. Its duties were to arrange for any social functions that seemed desirable and in general do those things which would further the welfare of the student body—things which individuals would hesitate to do or could do less effectively. One of the acts of the council last year was to get the students of the College of Education admitted to regular classification in the University and allowed to participate in all class activities. Under this plan our students vote at the elections for the University Undergraduate Council which is now also our Council.

After this it seemed confusing to maintain the Student Council on the old basis. Therefore a special student meeting was held in the Fall Quarter, 1911, and at this meeting it was decided to have a committee on Student Affairs which would take the place of the old Council and yet preserve our organization in some form. At the beginning of the Winter Quarter, 1912 the following were elected to the Committee:

MARY CHANEY	- - - - -	Chairman
KATHARINE POWELL	- -	Secretary and Treasurer

The Art Students Club

The Art Students Club is an organization composed of students who are specializing in the fine and industrial arts. The club holds regular meetings twice a month at which questions immediately connected with the teaching of the Art are discussed and lectures are given by different members of the Faculty and other men of note. The list of lectures for the spring quarter includes, Lorado Taft, Professors Sargent and Leavitt and H. H. Brown, instructor in art in the University High School.

KINDERGARTEN ALUMNI

For a long time the Kindergarten Graduates of the University had felt the need of closer organization, but not until the month of June, 1911, had anything like an adequate plan been devised.

Miss Alice Temple, head of the Kindergarten Department, conceived and put into execution the splendid idea of organizing a Kindergarten Alumni Association, whose purpose it is to create a feeling of social unity among the Kindergarten graduates.

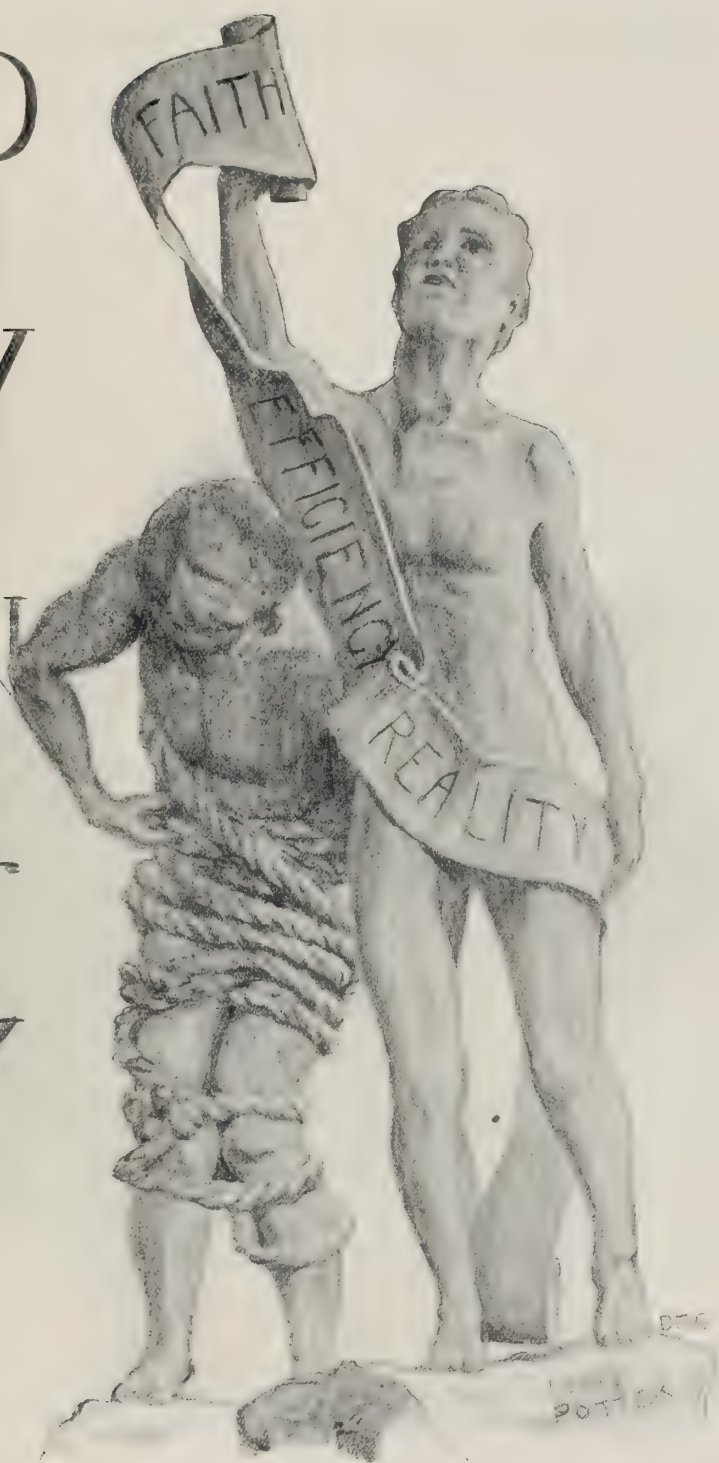

In June, 1911, the first meeting of those interested in the formation of the Association was held at the College of Education. The annual meetings will be held in June of every year.

The Divinity School

Forty-five years ago the Baptist Union Theological Seminary was founded at Morgan Park. At the founding of the University of Chicago in 1892, John D. Rockefeller endowed that seminary and caused it to become the Divinity School of the new institution. The Swedish Theological Seminary, a part of the Divinity School, is still located in the old buildings at Morgan Park, but the main body of the School is now doing their work in Haskell.

They say that it is no wonder that the Divinity School is kept in a museum, but as they also located the President's office there, at least it keeps good company. Then too, the building has its advantages; there are steps to sit on, and a mail box close by at the east door. The stairs are free from the vulgar crowd of Cobb Hall, and so steep that they always remind one of climbing Jacob's Ladder, which is a pious thought.

Half of Middle Divinity Hall belongs to the School, and all of South Divinity, but the pride of all is the Divinity School Married Men's Dormitory. This flat building at 5815 Drexel houses those students who get tired of the other dormitories.

Divinity students are perhaps the busiest students on the campus. Besides taking regular courses they pursue the studies in which they are interested through clubs. These clubs and the various other methods of complementing the work of the class-room all take time and work, but the real reason why the average divinity student is a busy man, is that he is usually out Saturday, Sunday and Monday working in his church. Dr. Hewitt until his death, and now "Father Stark," runs a sort of free employment bureau where the students may find the places that want them, and where churches can apply for pastors or "supplies." During the Winter Quarter eleven men were acting as assistants in religious institutions, thirty-one were the regular pastors of small churches, and fourteen frequently supplying. Most of the others do some voluntary work on Sundays. Through all these men the influence of the Divinity School and the University is felt for miles around, for the students are very much liked wherever they go, and people learn that the University of Chicago is not dead, nor a place of evil and destruction, but that its men are successful, aggressive, constructive. This has its value for the whole university for many an undergraduate remembers the distrust with which his parents sent him here because of religious reasons.

Along with all its work the Divinity School has a good social life, a college spirit, and an interest in the University of which it feels itself a part.

The Evangelistic Band

The Evangelistic Band is a group of the Divinity students who go out to hold evangelistic meetings in the neighboring towns.

The trip usually lasts from Friday evening to Monday morning. The aim is to use the sane, advanced methods, such as the University of Chicago stands for, and to work so effectively as to accomplish results. About ten men from the band go out on each trip. The arrival of such an enterprising bunch of young men in a small town always creates a stir, and there is never much difficulty about having attendance at the meetings. The church under whose auspices the Band holds its meetings, entertains the men in the homes of its members, and pays the expenses of the trip, otherwise there is no financial return for the time the Band members give.

The officers of the Band are:

Social Life and Activities

The regular religious social gathering of the Divinity students occurs once a week during the ten-thirty period on Thursday. This takes the form of an informal devotional meeting. Free from the presence of the professors the students sing, and talk and speak to each other about those things which mean the most to them.

Social functions come once or twice a quarter. Early in October Mrs. Mathews, assisted by the Council, gave a reception to the new students in Haskell Assembly Room. November 28, in Hutchinson Cafe was held the Autumn Quarter Banquet. The count around the long table came up to eighty-nine. During the winter Quarter a large delegation went from the school out to Maywood to the Lutheran Seminary to attend the Annual Inter-Seminary Banquet.

To chronicle the good times of the Divinity School during the past year, and leave out the Spring Athletic Festival, would be a crime indeed. Who will ever forget the chained devil held captive by a couple of bare-foot friars? The Divinity Section of the Parade really made a brilliant showing, and one that will long be remembered.

Athletics in the Divinity School has a hard row to hoe. The men are too busy to practice causing a season of many defeats. The Winter basketball schedule consisted of two rounds with each of the other Seminaries in the City, besides a double round with the classes in the University. There was an Inter-Seminary track meet held in the Patten Gymnasium in March.

The Divinity School basketball team consisted of

A. A. HOLTZ, Captain	J. G. McDONALD	J. F. BALZER
D. E. THOMAS	A. K. MATHER	A. J. HANSEN
C. A. NEYMAN		M. T. PRICE

In the regular Inter Seminary Tennis Tournament held during the Autumn Quarter, the Divinity School won second place through the good playing of Knapp and Jordan.

The Divinity Council decided this year to make the official emblem of the School consist of a square white 'D' on a maroon jersey. To the members of the teams will be given at the end of each season a Divinity School fob.

The big winter mass meeting for athletics proved one of the events of the year. Such sage wisdom was uncovered as that we ought to get behind ourselves and push the backbone to the front, that in yelling one should open his mouth and throw up his head. At this mass-meeting there came out the new yell of the school:

Whack!	Wow!
Rah, rah!	Rah!
Whee!	Hoopy!
Divinity!	Wow!

Divine Comedy

AS THEY LECTURE

Dean Mathews: "Just plain folks."

Moncrief: "I- -I- -I believe that—I believe in—in—in the Anglo-Saxon unification—if possible. Yes, yes, of course—if possible."

Stevens: "Ta da da! D'y see? Now sing it! One, two, one, two. D'y see?"

J. M. P. Smith: "Now gentlemen, if you only knew Hebrew—"

Soares: "If you want to waise woses, find the way Nature waises woses."

Mathews: "All Hell is divided into four parts, i. e. all Sheol."

Hoben: "I put it mildly when I say that the average man does not care a darn about half the stuff you preachers say!"

Blanchard: "I am going to skin you alive."

Why does Prof. G. B. Smith come to his classes ten minutes late every morning?

He is busy revising his theology, to bring it right up to the minute.

Why is G. B.'s head like heaven?

Because it's all shiny, and there is no parting there.

Overheard by J. M. P. Smith: One student—"I am taking a course under Smith this quarter." Other student—"Which Smith, bald head, or alphabet?"

Freshman: "Mr. Smith, what is your opinion on this subject?"

J. M. P.: "My opinion is not worth anything. If you want to know what I think you will have to get at it in a more diplomatic fashion than that."

Senior, butting in: Professor Smith, would you mind telling us what the great scholars think on the subject?"

Campus Capers

Was It Worth the Candle?

"You see, Stephens," said Phil's Sociology professor, "Girls are girls and Sociology is Sociology."

This seemed too logical and true even to Jack's muddled brain to admit of denial. Therefore he bit his fingernails wretchedly and waited for his tormentor to go on.

"It seems," continued Professor Smith, "that during the class review week you attended a house party—'fussing party', I believe you called it. Well and good, I have not the slightest objection in the world. But you understand, don't you, Stephens, that I can't repeat class exercises for the benefit of a young man who spent review week in frolicking?"

"The party only lasted three days," commenced Jack hopefully, "I spent one day before and two after it getting sleep."

"So much the worse," said the professor. "I'll admit that girls can give our favorite subject a race, but I'll back Sociology against sleep any time. I'm afraid that's all there is to be said, Stephens, the examination is tomorrow and you'd have to get 'A' in it to pass the course."

Jack shook his head side-wise and, grinning, walked toward the door. He paused before going out. "Thank you Professor Smith, I know you've been square with me; but isn't there any show, even if I should burn the midnight candle and all that?"

The professor looked up again and smiled. "If you should burn a candle a foot long there might be a 'show,' as you say. Good afternoon, Stephens."

Outside the door of the Cobb classroom, Jack jammed on his Senior hat, bolted down the stairs and into a telephone booth. He called Foster Hall and after the usual interminable wait, began to talk:

"That you, Judith? How are you?"

"All right. What's the matter now, Jack?"

"Oh I'm in an awful fix, as usual. Say, Judy, what would you say if I told you that I couldn't go to that dinner-dance tonight?"

"Oh Jack! HORRORS! You must go! Why I've a new dress and—"

"I know it, Judith, it's the deuce, but you see—"

"No I don't see. My own club dance; I wish I'd had sense enough to invite someone who—"

"There you go off the handle without giving a fellow a chance to—"

"To excuse himself for making a fool of me."

"That's not so at all, Judith, you see I've got to burn a candle a foot long and—"

"Jack Stephens, you've been drinking; you know what my father said and—"

"That's just it. It's Sociology and you know that he said if I didn't get my degree, we couldn't—"

Jack heard a receiver slam down at the other end of the wire; ventured a timid "hello" and then a louder one. There was no response. Another receiver banged and Jack turned away.

At the Press he bought a Sociology text book. Then started a grim tour of grocers, confectioners' and stationers. At one place he refused dainty pink candles of the birthday cake variety; at another he merely looked at more substantial white ones which, however did not measure up to his idea of a foot in length. Finally he secured a tall, funereal taper of ghastly white. He had it wrapped up securely and started for home.

"What have you got, Jack? Something to eat?" inquired a neighbor as Jack unlocked his door in Hitchcock.

"Go to the devil," said Jack and went in. From outside, he heard the chimes pealing six o'clock and against the green of the campus saw fellows going towards their rooms with tennis racquets, or chatting with girls in white. Whether Jack's groan as he pulled down the shades was suggested by the sight of the girls or by the inviting peal of bells at dinner hour, an outsider had no means of telling.

When all possible daylight had been excluded, Jack placed the lighted candle and the text book on the table before him and sat down. He disregarded friendly raps on the door and whistlings from below. When at eleven o'clock the pangs of hunger became really serious, he only lighted his pipe and doggedly crammed on.

In the stillness of the night, the candle burned quietly and clearly. It silhouetted against the wall the bent figure of the boy and the outline of the outspread book, the right and left piles of pages becoming gradually equal.

When the middle pages had been reached, Jack glanced quizzically at the candle and fancied that it had burned just half its length. He yawned and plunged once more into the volume—"The Manifoldness of the Individual"—Heavens! How slowly that candle burned—"The Psycho-Physical Communicating Apparatus"—If Jack could have put his hands on these benefactors of the human race, the authors of the book!

When doors slamming about the dormitory denoted a proximity to 8:30, Jack shut the book at the last page and watched the candle flutter and the wick finally disappear leaving only a greasy smear of wax. Then he threw himself on his bed and slept.

He swam alone and lunched at the Commons just before the doors were closed. Then shunning fellows he knew, he bought three yellow books and went over to Cobb. At the stairway inside he hesitated, bit his lip, buried his pride and turned to the telephone booth.

No, Judith was not in. Where was she? Why she'd taken her last examination, packed and left for home. She was going on a two o'clock train from the 63rd street station."

Jack stopped not a minute but started for the door. There he paused and looked over his shoulder at the clock—a quarter to two. Yes, there was time. But then the examination was at two. "Girls are girls," he quoted retracing his steps and starting up the stairs, "But Sociology is Sociology." Ignoring whispered inquiries as to whether he was taking a lesson in penmanship or repeating the examination for the papers, Jack wrote on for the full time and then left whistling.

Naturally enough he looked for something to do, and naturally enough found it in a supper with some classmates, a show, another supper, and an automobile ride.

Next morning Jack found both the letters he was looking for. He opened first a dainty note, mailed at a railway station:

"Friday Afternoon.

"Dear Jack:

"Honestly, Jack, you're nothing but a boy. If you had left me in the lurch to play with a kite instead of a candle, I shouldn't have been surprised. The small object in tissue paper enclosed, is your fraternity pin. I expect you'd better wear it until you find another as easy as,

"Judith."

Jack thrust the note in his pocket and opened the letter:

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY

"Friday Night.

"On the basis of the examination in Sociology taken by you yesterday, I have reported you for full credit in the course, thus making it possible, I believe, for you to take your degree next Tuesday.

"Was it worth the candle, my boy?

"Very sincerely,

"EDGAR L. SMITH."

"I believe it was," said Jack, fastening on his pin and tearing up his communications.

SENIORS—AND GOETTLER

Setting up the pieces for a game of chess with my friend Steele the other evening, I noticed among the wooden chessmen a single knight, beautifully carved from ivory. After the game I asked Steele if there were any singular circumstance connected with the lone trinket.

He nodded affirmatively, and being in an affable mood after his victory, proceeded to tell me the knight's history.

"That knight," he began, "was one of the set used by my maternal grandfather. I prize it because it once saved his life and last year saved mine."

"Notice the dent on the standard? It is the imprint of a bullet fired by a rebel in the Civil War. In the stories, it is usually a Bible that providentially intervenes between the bullet of the enemy and the heart of the hero. Grandfather's case was not so conventional. It seems that when the Confederates suddenly attacked the Federal troops at Sharpesburg, grandfather was playing chess in the tent of his colonel. At the alarm, they arose hastily and grandfather unconsciously slipped into his breast pocket the piece he had been about to move. Of course, he was fired at and of course the chessman deflected the bullet in true orthodox fashion. Oh, it all seems light fiction to us, but it was considered a remarkable occurrence at the time."

"Grandfather died many years ago, but grandmother always preserved this ivory knight. Two years ago when I was starting with a railroad surveying gang for Central Africa, an odd whim seized her. Nothing would do but I must carry this chessman—this amulet, if you will, that had saved my grandfather's life."

"To please her I thrust it in my pocket and promised to keep it with me, though to tell the truth, I expected to depend more on quinine for my salvation than on ivory mementos."

"Three months later, when I had forgotten the incident, I was one day in camp alone, forty miles north of Gao, on the Niger. The others were surveying an approach for a bridge, several miles away, and I was on my cot recovering from a slight fever."

"We had experienced little difficulty with the Sengales tribes in the vicinity, but should have been on our guard; hunting had been poor, and minor troubles of various sorts had been disturbing the natives. We learned afterward that they pitched on us as the innocent cause of their disasters; our presence was distasteful to their gods. Probably their jealous medicine men had told them we were missionaries—which we weren't."

"Anyway, at about three that afternoon a band of about twenty of the black wretches suddenly and quietly surrounded the camp and prepared to carry me off."

"A young fellow who had worked at a mission camp informed in vile English that their chief must see me at once. I resolved inwardly to disappoint him, if possible. It might be all right and it might not. I had heard ugly stories of the sacrifice of alien white men to propitiate angry gods."

"I lay quietly a moment before answering. Undoubtedly these fellows knew as well as I that my companions would not be back until sunset. Three or four hours—lots of things might happen in that time."

"I was afraid to refuse point blank, for they were twenty to one and no gun in reach. Finally an idea struck me and I resolved upon a ruse. Closing my eyes, I muttered some inarticulate words. Then I turned to the spokesman and said that my gods disapproved; I could not go."

"I was mistaken if I thought this would work absolutely; it did in part, however. Turning from his fellows, the interpreter asked to see my god—only the sight of a deity would convince them that I was divinely bidden and protected."

"You have already guessed the rest. I remembered the ivory knight; drew it from my pocket and gravely kow-towed to it thrice. Convinced that I was in the care of a supreme being, the natives left me. Do you wonder that I prize this chessman?"

"Steele," I said without answering his question, "that's a lie."

"I know it," he answered, "but you wanted a story."

FRIENDS

Heimweh

Well, I've seen the river Rhine,
The stream the Germans sing to,
Flanked with castle hill and vine,
That a thousand memories cling to.
I'll admit the sight is fine,
But it didn't send the quivers
Circulating through my spine
Illinois has lots of rivers.

And the Heidelberger Schloss
Is a building poets dream o'er,

That when mists its towers cross
Fairy banners seem to stream o'er;
But I shall not mourn the loss
In forgetting the exact stone,
Where some Teuton won the toss—
When again I greet the Blackstone.

Big Berlin is not so tame;
Muenchner beer I do not scoff at;
Hamburg is not just a name;
Koeln and Frankfort I get off at.
But I feel about the same
As the chap you fellows saw go
Last October, and I claim
I'm still stronger for Chicago.

Bluffing

BLUFFING is the TRICK of FOOLING yourself in an attempt to fool OTHERS. BLUFFING is an ART which demands ARTIFICE for success. BLUFFING comes in HANDY,—though it often HANDS you something that isn't HANDSOME.

Doctor Cook BLUFFED the PUBLIC for a while—but it soon gave him a COLDER reception than he would have had at the POLE. Bryan TRIED three times to BLUFF the people but a show-down proved too much for his Democracy.

BLUFFING the PROFS. is a popular College GAME, but many a BLUFF has caved in and ended with a LANDSLIDE. You CAN BLUFF SOME Of the Profs. SOME of the time, SOME Profs. ALL of the time, —but you CAN'T bluff ALL the Profs ALL of the time.

BLUFFING may seem very nice when your BLUFF is so STEEP that no one dares to climb it—but look out for that LANDSLIDE. Many an IMPOSING BLUFF has CRUMBED into DECOMPOSING STUFF.

HANNIBAL and his ELEPHANTS crossed the ALPS; SAN MARTIN crossed the ANDES; many a PROF. can climb BLUFFS. EXPERIENCE is a great TEACHER,—but TEACHERS often TEACH great EXPERIENCES. Just because I got by the EDITORS with THIS BLUFF is no sign that YOU can get by the PROFS. with YOURS.

Grades

GRADES are the SHORT HAND CODE used to tell STUDENTS what the PROFS think of their cerebral machinery. GRADES are FREE,—but there are all GRADES of GRADES. It doesn't take much WORK to go DOWN GRADE—the PROFS will PUSH YOU. It's the UP GRADE that DEMANDS the ENERGY. Every PINNACLE must be reached by an UP GRADE fight, and the A's are on the PINNACLE of the Academic Mountain. The man who tries to SPEED UP HILL speedily LOSES his wind—and seldom gets to the top. It's the STEADY worker who can go UP any GRADE; the Man on SLOW SPEED, who reaches the HIGHEST GRADE,—SUCCESS. Rockefeller started UP GRADE as an office boy; Roosevelt was once a cowboy; Lincoln was once a backwoodsman; Franklin was once a printer's devil; and they all climbed STEADILY to as great a height of GLORY as the American Eagle ever has attained.

The engineer GRADES the railroad track; the PROF GRADES YOUR TRACK. Look BACK and see if YOU are going UP GRADE. SUCCESS is on a mountain; if YOU are going UP GRADE you are GRADUALLY approaching SUCCESS. If SUCCESS is SOUGHT for, it MUST be FOUGHT for; SUCCESS is the GIFT of THRIFT, not the PUCK of LUCK.

R. Jays

The College Graduate

Has the college graduate GRADUATED? No,—he IS graduated, graduated along a SCALE to FINAL graduation—SUCCESS. Though he has finished SCHOOL, he has NOT finished his SCHOOLING; he has years of experience before him under the ROD of MASTER experience. His SHEEPSKIN supposedly means that his is not a SHEEP'S SKIN, nor his a CALF'S brain—and now he has to prove it. His four years of college was an INVESTMENT; the graduate's NOTE is due—it's up to him to PAY in COMMON SENSE. He WAS a recumbent; now he IS an INCUMBENT; it is his duty not to be a SUCCUMB-ENT. He is an ENGINE, a human machine; what's his EFFICIENCY? How much of what has been PUT INTO him can the world get OUT of him? What has he yet to learn? Much!—He may be a COLLEGE graduate—but he isn't a KNOWLEDGE-graduate!

Examinations

EXAMINATIONS are one of the PATHOLOGICAL conditions of COLLEGE life, an INVENTION of the PROFS whereby they can PUMP knowledge and information from the STUDENTS.

EXAMINATIONS should be ABOLISHED! Is it any wonder that students go insane or become socialists; that they become teachers or reformers; that they become hypocrites or preachers when they know that every few months some Prof is going to delve into the privacy of their minds and dig and prod for all the information he can get? Is it any wonder that students become Hedonists when Profs make life a bore?

With the agitation for "cemetery" drinking cups and Civil "Serveless" Examinations—with the cry for "Poor" Food laws—why not the cry for college reform? What right has a Prof to demand a student to tell his opinion of social conditions, how he would invest $500,000, why and when Rome fell, who wrote Burns' poems, what's the Malthusian doctrine, or some such question. Let said Prof ASK POLITELY for enlightenment, but he should not be allowed to DEMAND IMPERTINENTLY. If the Prof. doesn't know, why isn't he still in schooling?

Be independent! Don't answer all your examination questions. Don't encourage the Profs to be too forward. You are at college to be TAUGHT by the Profs—NOT to TEACH the PROFS. Silence is golden—keep still and be rich.

ALEXANDER made History—he didn't repeat what others told him though History is said to repeat itself. PYTHAGORAS and EUCLID made MATHEMATICS—they didn't learn it. SHAKESPEARE made ENG-LISH, he didn't repeat that of others. The National Cash Register is a great mathematician, the Burroughs Adding machine is a great figurer, the Typewriter is a great scribe, the Graphophone is a great talker—yet none of them went to school. ORIGINATE in your EXAMS—use your own brains—forget the Prof's. Don't CRAM—THINK. Make use of what you KNOW YOU KNOW and KNOW YOU KNOW what's right.

FORGET MARKS and you'll MAKE your MARK. Don't YOU WORRY about what you KNOW—let the PROF WORRY about what he'll LEARN from your EXAM.

ALMA MATER.

To-night we gladly sing the praise
Of her who owns us as her sons;
Our loyal voices let us raise,
And bless her with our benisons
Of all fair mothers, fairest she—
Most wise of all that wisest be,
Most true of all the true, say we,
Is our dear Alma Mater.

Her mighty learning we would tell,
The life is something more than lore;
She could not love her sons so well,
Loved she not truth and honor more.
We prize her for skill of charity,
Her faith that truth shall make men free,
That right shall live eternally,
We praise our Alma Mater.

The City White hath fled the earth,
But where the same waters lie,
A bolder city hath its birth,
The City Gray that never shall die
For decades and for centuries—
Its battle-flags and banners shall rise,
Beneath the ben-dicted western stars,
'Tis our dear Alma Mater.

FIGHT FOR VICTORY.

Go, Chicago, Go—Hear the bleachers roar,
Fighting for every yard, piling up the score,
Fight, fight for victory, now, all up on your toes,
We'll not give in, for we've got to win
For old Chicago—go

ALL FOR CHICAGO.

Tune: My Hero ("Chocolate Soldier").

All, all, all for Chicago,
Rah! Rah! Hurrah!
All, all, all for Chicago,
Rah! Rah! Hurrah!
Chorus: Go, go, go for Chicago,
Go, go, go, Go, go, Chicago,
Chorus: Go, go, go
Rah! Rah! Rah! for Chicago go
Rah! Rah! Hurrah!

LATEST NEWS FROM MADISON

Madison, Nov. 22, 10 A. M.

Richards protests Whiting, claiming to have proof that Whiting was center of Indiana for many years. (Editor: The Cardinal coach has evidently been misled by the fact that Whiting is the center of the Standard Oil Industry of Indiana which properly affiliates him with Chicago. See Trustees Ordinances, Ch. XI, Clause 2.)

10:10 A. M.

Private Detective Nick Carter, who has scored more points for Wisconsin this year than any other member of the team, reports that Sauer of Chicago bears a bad name, his alias being "Whiskey." Richards promises immediate investigation as it is plain that the star half-back is in bad odor on the Midway.

10:19 A. M.

Richards gives out two grounds for disqualification of Serruly.

1. He is too good to be true.

2. Richards asserts that in all his football experience he never knew a good player to work his way through college unassisted.

If these are not sufficient Richards promises other equally unanswerable charges.

10:25 A. M.

One of the football teams' attorneys has just brought in a sheaf of affidavits showing Quarter-Back Paine to be a professional prize-winner. It is alleged that he is being put through college on the income from prizes and gate money received by his parents from

A Truly Fraternal Way

Greek was required in father's day,

At college, at college.

The alphabet's all that we need today,

At college, at college.

We tack a few letters on the door;

They help create an air of state;

They ornament pillows and pennants
and, more,

They furnish a name for our Frat.

Our men are bonded in union true,

Fraternal, fraternal.

Often they're bonded with others too;

But of course there's a system to that.

For that's a part of fraternity life,

Our most effective plan;

Every crowd has a share in each affair,

And boosts its representative man.

We swing our deals without any strife,

To grab what honors we may.

*Oh, our methods are swift, when a man
takes a lift,*

In a truly fraternal way!

Fall is the time when the Frosh arrive,

At college, at college.

That's when fraternities look alive,

At college, at college.

We hunt for the finest type of men,

The snappy lad, with coinful dad;

A simple-souled athlete gets by now and then.

By way of an ad for our Frat.

Freshmen we cherish with tender eye,

Fraternal, fraternal.

To railroad them all into clubs we try;

And of course there's a system to
that.

For that's a part of fraternity life,

Our most effective plan.

Every crowd has a share in each affair,

And boosts its representative man.

We swing our deals without any strife,

To grab what honors we may,

*Oh, our methods are swift, when a man
takes a lift,*

In a truly fraternal way!

The Neglected Education

There are many things that a student may know,
Why this and that are so and so—
Why Anthropology makes such a hit,
How easy it is to loaf through it.

Students learn things every day,
When they study or when they play,
When they wake or when they sleep—
BUT, no "stude" knows what hours to keep!

LINES ON BEING LEFT HOME ON PROM NIGHT*

It isn't the thing you did, Jack,
It's the thing you left undone,
That gives me a bit of the heartache,
Now that the night's begun——

The flowers you didn't send, Jack,
The letter you didn't write,
The Prom you didn't ask me to,
Are my haunting ghosts tonight!

A Bee Ballad

H, a Bumble Bee loved a Humble Bee,
But the haughty queen of a hive was she;
And when he said, "Come, let's be wed,"
She only frowned and shook her head.
(That is, the haughty Humble Bee Refused to wed the Bumble Bee.)

For a queen was she, and a drone was he,
And their stations were diff'rent as could be.
But said he to she, "Oh, won't you be,
My own adorable bee Hebe!"
(Just so, the humble Bumble Bee
Made love to the haughty Humble Bee.)

But one fine day there chanced that way
A scientific Botany jay,
Who said, "You bet your life I'll get
These HYMENOPTERA in my net."
(Meanwhile no danger did they see,
The Humble Bee and the Bumble Bee.)
That Botany Stude was bit too rude,
And the Bees found his hand made exc'llent food.
And so he cried, but both Bees died,
And fell to the cold earth, side by side.
(Well, that is the last was ever seen
Of the Bumble Bee and the Humble queen.)

Nonsense

There once was a student drew nothing but A's
Defended the practice by saying it pays.

Oh, what nonsense, perfect nonsense.

Each night of the week he would solemnly camp
With note book and text book, eye-shade and lamp.

Oh, what nonsense, awful nonsense.

He loved the law library, think how depraved;
He wore creaseless trousers and, worse, never shaved;
He shunned all receptions, informals and proms;
Preferred to talk Ethics with Summer school ma'ams

*Nonsense, nonsense,
Was ever such a case?
What did he come to college for?
To fuss with studies? Horrid bore.
How did he have the face?
Who'd be such an anchorite?
Everlasting human blight.
Wasn't he a shining light!
Nonsense, nonsense, nonsense!*

One day when our student was walking from Cobb,
He met a fair Fosterite; bowed with a bob.

Oh, what nonsense, perfect nonsense.

She smiled, and he thought she had taken to him,
This sallow young book-biter, trowsy and grim.

Oh, what nonsense, awful nonsense.

But now comes a change you would never expect;
From grinding he turns to the Social Elect;
He studies up flowers and candy and calls;
For the smile of a college girl, thusly, he falls.

*Nonsense, nonsense,
Was ever such a case?
What did he come to college for?
For earnest study? Nevermore!
How he goes the pace.
See his college raiment bright;
Girly led him to the right.
Occupation, rather light?
Nonsense, nonsense, nonsense!*

To===='s Mackinaw

A girl (guess who?), had a coat so loud
That the thunder up in the blackening cloud
Cried, "Since I can't be heard, why then,
I'll never, no never, thunder again!"

After the Supper

After the supper is over, and the waltzes begin again,
You sit in a cozy corner humming the soft refrain.
You sit at her side a-dreaming and murmur some comment meet;
She answers your smile with another, and you secretly ease your feet.

She laughs at some grotesque dancer out there on the checkered floor;
Her laugh is more sweet than the music, and you listen to hear some more;
She whispers some little nonsense in tones that are soft and sweet;
You smile in appreciation, and secretly ease your feet.

The world is just happy and joyous, and peaceful and restful and calm;
It is after the supper is over on the night of the Senior Prom.
The music strikes up in the distance and you throb to the waltzes beat;
You rise and whirl off with your partner, in spite of your aching feet.

You whirl through the maze of young dancers as if there were none but you two;
Your eyes are fixed only on her eyes, her eyes of the softest blue;
You are dizzy and giddy but happy, she is lovely and fair and petite;
You are thinking of her and the future; you've forgotten your aching feet.

After the Prom is over and you've lighted your cigarette,
And you sit in your room a-dreaming, you swear 'twas the best dance yet.
You rest your head back on the cushion, still dreaming dreams that are sweet
Your pumps are under the bureau and you're easing your aching feet.

Although our prices are moderate, averaging, probably under Forty dollars, we give you the lines, cut, swing and character you will notice in the highest priced tailoring.

In doing this we have found it necessary to install our own workshop, where the garments have the same painstaking care and attention that we give in designing and draping, thereby carrying out our idea in the finished product, something impossible to attain using the old style methods.

Whether your taste runs to the modern English, or to the more conservative, you receive the same careful attention.

If the American ideal of manhood finds its expression in the top-heavy, over-dressed men illustrated in the "Style Books," and fashion plates of the ready-made clothing manufacturer, we have mistaken our vocation.

We believe that there will always be a sufficient number of men to appreciate the distinction that comes from gentility in dress for our business to continue to increase in the future as it has in the past.

The University of Chicago

COBB HALL

The Organization of the University includes the Graduate School of Arts and Literature; the Ogden (Graduate) School of Science; the Colleges (Senior and Junior) of Arts, Literature, and Science; the Divinity School; the Law School; Courses in Medicine; the College of Education; the College of Commerce and Administration.

FACULTY, ENDOWMENT, AND EQUIPMENT—The faculty numbers four hundred and fifteen, offering instruction in twenty-seven departments and four professional schools; the libraries contain 357,041 volumes and 170,000 pamphlets. The University owns ninety acres of land in Chicago and has thirty-five buildings.

The University year is divided into quarters: the Autumn (October to December); the Winter (January to March); the Spring (April to Mid. June); the Summer (Mid. June to August). Students are admitted at the opening of each quarter; graduation exercises are held at the close of each quarter.

The Summer Quarter of the University commends itself especially to teachers and professional men. Full University credit is given for courses attended during this quarter, and in this way the residence necessary for obtaining a degree may be completed. A special pamphlet covering the courses for the Summer Quarter is issued in the Spring and will be sent on request.

Every department and group of allied departments issues its own circular descriptive of the courses. These circulars may be had upon application.

DEGREES—In the Graduate Schools are conferred the degrees of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts or Science; on the Colleges, the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, of Science, or of Philosophy; in the Divinity School, the degrees of Bachelor of Divinity, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy; in the Law School, the degrees of Doctor of Law and Bachelor of Laws; in the School of Education, the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Literature, or Science, in Education.

FELLOWSHIPS, SCHOLARSHIPS, STUDENT SERVICE, ETC.—By virtue of endowments and special appropriations, fellowships and honor scholarships and service afford stipends or free tuition to a number of able and deserving students.

THE INGHAM SHOWER MIXER

"Maxium Comfort,
Safety, Economy"

The Ingham Shower Mixer is the most perfect piece of mechanism for instantly and accurately furnishing water of any desired temperature.

A simple turn of indicating handle to "cold" opens the cold water valve only. A further turn to "warm" opens hot water or steam valve, which tempers the cold water for a warm shower. No matter how far the indicating handle is turned, there is absolutely no danger of scalding water reaching the bather, as only sufficient hot water or steam to temper the cold water to a predetermined maximum, generally 110 to 115 degrees, can enter the mixing chamber. This insures absolute safety to bather.

The Ingham Shower Mixer

Is most economical in the use of water or steam because no time is lost in testing for desired temperature. Turning of indicator handle instantly delivers just the water desired. This means less time for the bath and permits more people having access to it.

The Ingham is simple and durable —nothing to get out of order.

No keep-up cost. Easily installed, guaranteed absolutely. It will pay you well to investigate the Ingham.

"MOSSLER CLOTHES"

The Character of the Clothes usually indicate the Character of the Man

Our Evening Dress Clothes for this season have a softness, both in tone and material, draping the form so as to give an easy graceful pose.

We are specializing an Evening Dress Suit, together with Tuexedo Coat, (silk lined throughout) Complete Outfit, $55. Suit only (Tuexedo or Evening Dress) $35.

THERE is a decided leaning toward the English styles at all the leading universities. Few houses in America can supply this demand; the styles shown are usually either "too American" or "too English." The "Mossler Clothes" Chicago, are a happy medium and are accepted as standard at all the leading universities.

We are pleased to submit samples and a model garment on request. Merely the chest and waist measurements are necessary to assure a perfectly draped garment. The "Mossler Models" vary in character and styles. We select the model according to the description of the prospective patron--whether tall, short, lean, stout or regular built.

Jones Stokers Eliminate the Smoke Nuisance

The coal is fed to a hopper located just outside of the boiler front. It falls in front of a ram plunger attached to the piston rod of the cylinder, and is carried by the forward movement of the plunger and the blocks on a rod (located in the bottom of the retort) beneath the fuel that was first introduced. The movement of the fuel in and above the retort is upward and backward, thus changing the formation of the entire bed of fuel every time fuel is introduced.

Air for combustion is admitted between the green fuel and the fire bed. The stem pressure itself automatically controls the fuel and air supply, proportioning them to each other and to varying loads in just the correct amount to obtain most complete combustion possible from any grade of bituminous coal. As grates form no part of the Jones System loss of fuel through grate bars is impossible. As combustion is commercially complete and air supply is correct, economy results and incidentally the smoke nuisance is eliminated.

(See these stokers in operation in your university power plant.)

Shorthand

is the Dominant System in America Today

Last year the system was adopted by more than 400 schools—public and private. Every year shows a constantly increasing demand for it. There is but one reason why this condition exists—the efficiency of the system.

In the contests, Gregg Shorthand has conclusively proved its superiority—in simplicity, legibility and speed.

The demand for well-trained teachers of Gregg Shorthand, having a university education, is increasing, due to the large number of high schools introducing the system every year. There are never enough available candidates who are university trained.

Our courses prepare for high-grade stenographic, secretarial, and teaching positions. Attend the home of Gregg Shorthand where the instruction is under the direction of the author, Mr. John Robert Gregg. The school is in session throughout the entire year.

Write for catalogue No. 15, and state what department of the work you are most interested in.
